Beer workers face lockout ultimatum

Heart attack fells Sellers

LONDON (UPI) — Actor-comedian Peter Sellers, 54 and plagued by heart trouble for the past 16 years, suffered a massive heart attack and then cardiac arrest today. His doctors said he was "gravely ill."

Rushed to Middlesex Hospital after the heart attack in his hotel suite, Sellers almost died from the cardiac arrest suffered in the ambulance.

His fourth wife, actress Lynne Frederick, was reported en route from Hollywood to be with him.

The drama began at the Dorchester Hotel where the actor was awaiting a reunion with Spike Milligan and Harry Secombe, with whom he made radio history a generation ago in The Goon Show.

Sellers had a massive coronary six weeks after he married actress Britt Ekland in 1964.

The contract dispute between the Brewery Workers Union and the three major beer companies in B.C. is coming to the crunch.

A 13-hour bargaining session broke off early today in Vancouver with a demand by the companies that the 1,000 workers accept the industry's current offer by midnight Friday — or face an industry-wide lockout.

Eric Harris, chief negotiator for Labatt, Molson and Carling O'Keefe, said the companies offered a $1-an-hour wage increase in each year of a three-year agreement. This, he said, amounted to a 29.7-per-cent increase and would raise the typical pay of a worker on the bottle line to $27,000 a year.

Union president John Langley said wages had hardly been discussed and were not the main issue.

"We're not that far away on money but there's a lot more than money here," Langley said. "This is a union security issue. We're going to ask the whole labor movement in B.C. to back us up on this one — they (the breweries) are in for a big fight."

Harris said management's ultimatum was brought on by work slowdowns which had been hampering production for a week.

"We've informed the union that this restriction on operations has forced us to put a time frame on this matter because we can't permit it to continue," Harris said.

The union president said the two sides are far from a settlement on the language of a contract.

Victoria-area liquor stores are getting beer on a rotating basis so, on a given day, some will have it and others won't.

A check this morning of four outlets showed that two had a normal amount and two had none.

In the event of a strike or lockout, the supply of American beer could dry up as well as the domestic variety.

During a three-month brewery strike-lockout in 1978, the B.C. liquor control board allowed larger than normal imports of American beer to ease the shortage.

However, the brewery union recently affiliated with the B.C. Government Employees Union and Langley said earlier in the current dispute that his union is considering asking the BCGEU to seek a "hot" declaration from the B.C. Federation of Labor which would effectively halt the sale of U.S. beer in the province.

Key search pays off

A set of keys found on a traffic victim — and six hours spent checking apartments in the Jubilee area — has led to the identification of a woman who died Sunday after being struck on Oak Bay Avenue.

City police said the 77-year-old woman carried no money or identification and they assumed she had just stepped out of a nearby apartment for an after dinner stroll.

Eleanor McNabb, 101-2056 Oak Bay, received multiple injuries when in collision with a car near Davie about 7 p.m. three blocks from her home. The driver was Janice Godard, 25, of 946 Ellery.

Police confirmed through a locksmith two keys found on the victim were for the street door and apartment door of a block of suites. But the locksmith could not identify which block out of many in the district.

Officers began their search by trying the front doors of apartment buildings between Fort Street and Oak Bay Avenue and by 11 p.m. Monday they had located the block.

Because of its size and the late hour, they were reluctant to try individual room doors after tenants had retired for the night. Police postponed the room check until this morning.

But at 1 a.m. a relative called police to report the family had not heard from their mother and could not reach her apartment.

When police suggested a connection with the accident victim, the relative was able to identify the woman temporarily through her personal effects and confirmed it this morning.

Fireman rammed, run over

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city fireman was injured Monday when a fire truck was rammed by a car and the car's driver returned to run him over.

Police said the incident began when a fire truck was preparing to back into the fire hall. They said a car blocked the way into the hall and the fireman spoke to the driver. The driver of the car then rammed the fire truck, knocking off a door and injuring the fireman.

The fireman, Ross Edward, 34, was in satisfactory condition in hospital with a broken hand and foot.

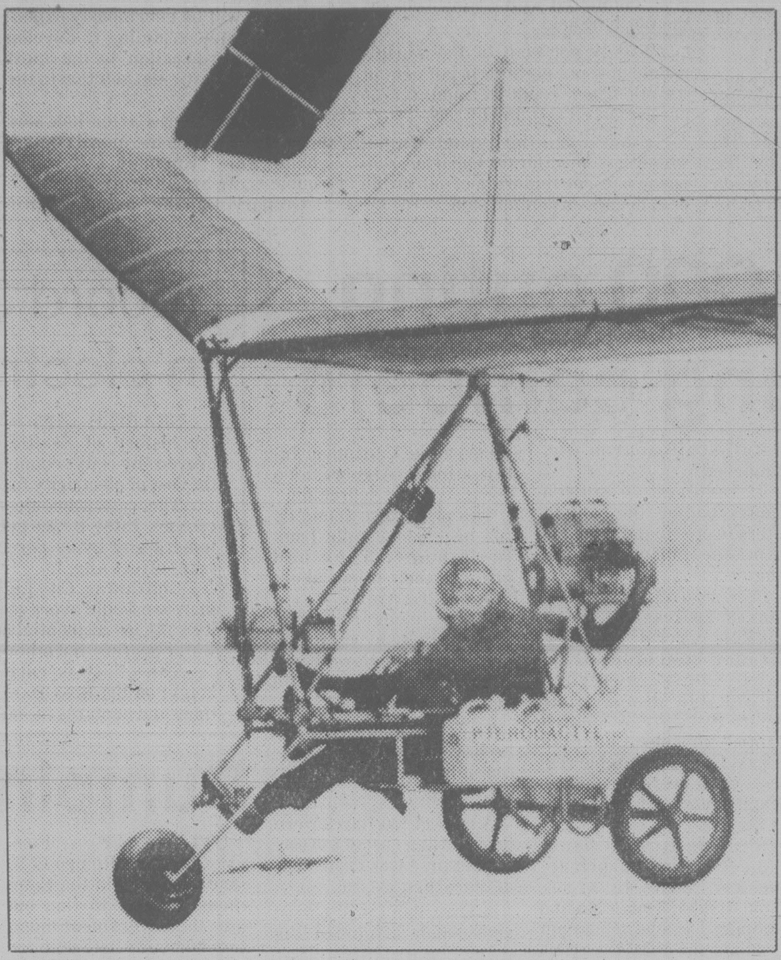
LAFAYETTE, La. (UPI) — Blazing temperatures and a broken air conditioner prompted visiting preacher the Rev. Al Maschareno to treat his congregation to one of the shortest sermons on record.

The two sentence sermon was:

"You think it's hot up here? Stay away from down there," he said, pointing to the floor — and beyond.



FLIGHT OF FANCY ended in Baie Comeau, Quebec today for would-be transatlantic flyer Eagle Sarmont who was told this morning he has been officially grounded. The federal transport department ruled Sarmont's motorized hang glider, dubbed "the spirit of California," is an aircraft and must meet several regulations before it can go any further. Sarmont, who had hoped to resume his trip to Paris today said he is going to lobby to have the ruling changed. Sarmont was met by RCMP officers Monday as he climbed out of his glider after being forced to land by impending darkness.

Blockade sought to crush military junta in Bolivia

LA PAZ (AP) — Bolivian political and labor leaders called today for an international economic blockade to help bring down the military junta that overthrew the civilian government last week.

The Committee for the Defence of Democracy, in a statement distributed secretly to embassies, accused Gen. Luis Garcia Meza's forces of killing opponents and dumping their bodies in common graves; arresting or driving into hiding hundreds of politicians and union leaders, depriving Bolivians of all but official versions of the news and censoring reports by foreign correspondents.

The military regime has admitted only two dead since last Thursday's coup and has refused to say how many persons have been arrested. Reliable sources have reported at least four additional fatalities.

The committee, formed last year amid rumors of an impending coup by ultra-conservative military officers, also asked all states to withhold recognition of the military chiefs who overthrew interim President Lydia Gueiler to block the election of former president Hernan Siles Zuazo, a leftist, to succeed her.

"No government that is at all humanistic could recognize a bunch of uniformed psychopaths," said the statement, signed by five members of the committee. Most of the committee are in hiding.

As of Monday night, no government had recognized the new regime and the takeover has been condemned by the United States and democratically governed states in Latin America.

Despite the imposition of martial law, sporadic street fighting continued at night in La Paz, and more fighting was reported in the southern tin-mining areas.

Loansharks outlawed, maximum interest 60%

OTTAWA (CP) — The government introduced legislation Monday to officially outlaw loansharking and to allow credit unions to compete with banks in offering small loans to consumers.

But Progressive Conservative objections to a provision making it a criminal offence to charge more than 60 per cent annual interest on a loan blocked immediate passage of the bill. It is unclear whether it will become law before the Commons summer recess, scheduled to begin this week.

The legislation would repeal the Small Loans Act, which prevents credit unions, caisses populaires, trust companies and loan companies — but not banks — from charging more than 12 per cent interest on loans under $1,500.

The law was enacted 40 years ago to ensure that needy people would be able to get loans at reasonable interest rates.

The 12-per-cent limit was added in 1956 when the bank rate, now over 10 per cent, was only three per cent.

When rates on consumer loans soared to almost 20 per cent earlier this year, small loans regulated by this act dried up, forcing some desperate people to turn to loansharks, the consumer affairs department said in a paper released Monday.

The proliferation of credit cards has made small loans under this act less important, the department said. They account for less than 0.5 per cent of all consumer credit today.

While removing the ceiling on small loans, the bill would go after loansharks by making it an offence under the Criminal Code to charge more than 60 per cent annual interest.

Loansharking itself is not a crime. Police prosecute loansharks on charges of intimidation, assault or extortion arising from their collection techniques.

Three more flee prison by raft

Three potentially dangerous William Head prisoners escaped Monday night by cutting their way out of a dormitory and using a section of the prison wharf as a raft.

The raft was found early today a short distance from the prison at Weir's Beach.

Officials are uncertain what tool the inmates used to cut their way out of the dormitory or how it was obtained.

The escapers — the 8th, 9th and 10th this year — are:

All were serving time for breaking and entering offences. Johnson also had been convicted of a number of minor offences, and an earlier escape attempt.

The escape occurred between 11:15 p.m. Monday night and 2:40 this morning.

Since the beginning of this year four other escapes have occurred at the medium-security institution.

In January two inmates tried to swim from the prison and are believed to have drowned.

In February two inmates again took to the water but were captured later.

Earlier this month in two separate attempts three inmates escaped and haven't been recaptured. One of them built his own raft.

Prison director Arlie Bender said the escapes aren't connected to unrest about conditions in the prison.

"We've done a complete analysis of the escapes and there seem to be no common reason."

Bender said the majority of the escapers are young and relatively new to the institution.

The prison will be installing a new look-out post further down the beach later this year as well as improving lighting in an attempt to discourage escapes. The prison is built on a peninsula.

Gallagher offered apology

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arthur Elworthy, general manager of the B.C. Steamship Corp., wrote a letter Jan. 16 to a cabinet committee appointed by Premier Bill Bennett to investigate and resolve differences between the B.C. Steamship Corp. and its sister corporation, the B.C. Ferry Corp.

A copy of Elworthy's letter was obtained by The Canadian Press which on Feb. 2 distributed a story to its member newspapers. The story, reproducing parts of the letter, was published in the Victoria Times Feb.2.

Elworthy's letter contained a number of remarks which were highly critical of Charles Gallagher, general manager of the B.C. Ferry Corp. These remarks were and are unjustified and Elworthy and The Canadian Press have apologized to Gallagher for any embarrassment or concern he may have suffered as a result of distribution of the letter's contents. Elworthy and The Canadian Press also have stated that at no time did they intend to impugn the personal honesty, integrity or competence of Gallagher.

New bacteria just eat 2;4-D

Times News Services

Researchers at two U.S. laboratories have announced developments in genetic engineering which hold out hope for mass production of a synthetic insulin and a method of converting the persistent defoliant 2,4,D into an innocuous substance.

At the Battelle Laboratories in Columbus, Ohio, using genetic engineering techniques, scientists have developed bacteria that ingest the compound 2,4-D, a defoliant, and then become an innocuous product that may be converted into salable items such as fertilizers.

The experiment was one of several studies the scientists made to find ways that microorganisms can be used to transform or degrade toxic chemicals such as 2,4-D and DDT into easily disposable products.

The researchers first selected a soil bacterium that used 2,4-D as its carbon source. They then isolated the genes that caused the trait and transferred them to a different host bacterium. This bacterium — a single, undifferentiated cell — readily accepted the donor genes and transmitted the new characteristic to its daughter cells.

The Battelle scientists, Drs. George Kidd and George Pierce, believe that the development of bacteria that can ingest toxic chemicals or pollutants and convert them to other substances has vast potential for industry. They believe that microorganisms may eventually be developed to dispose of industrial wastes, reclaim land or extract useful chemicals.

Meanwhile, scientists in Indianapolis have developed a new type of insulin, created by gene splicing techniques.

It will be tested on humans before the end of the year, says a spokesman for Eli Lilly and Co., which pioneered the commercial production of insulin.

The pharmaceutical firm is moving ahead with a $40-million project to build plants in the U.S. and in Britain where the hormone will be produced in quantity.

The scientific breakthrough is the first product of Lilly's research program in recombinant DNA technology.

Almost 60 years ago, Lilly pioneered the commercial production of insulin as a result of the scientific discoveries of Canadian doctors Sir Frederick Banting and Charles Best.

Testing of the new type of insulin is already under way on eight healthy volunteers in Britain, Davis said. The research later will progress to diabetics before the insulin is ready to be commercially marketed.

Theoretically, laboratory-created insulin could be produced in unlimited amounts and less expensively than insulin from animal glands. An estimated 8,000 pounds of animal pancreases are needed to produce one pound of pure insulin.

Scramble for oil seen as growing war threat

TORONTO (CP) — The threat of global conflicts over oil will increase through the rest of this century as more countries place greater demands on energy resources, F. H. Knelman of Concordia University in Montreal said Monday.

Knelman, professor of science and human affairs, told the first annual global conference on the future that world consumption of oil could rise to 40 billion barrels annually by the year 2000 from the present 23 billion barrels and that much of the increase will come from regions other than the Western industrialized countries.

Consumption by the Third World is increasing at an annual rate of six per cent, compared with 2.5 per cent for the West, he said.

"Eighty per cent of the world's people now use eight to 10 per cent of its oil. They could account for 20 per cent of oil demand by 2000."

In addition, the Soviet Union, which has been an oil exporter, will become a net importer of oil in the next decade, Knelman said.

Conflicts over oil will therefore intensify unless the West undertakes a massive program of energy conservation.

Knelman said alternative energy resources will be enormously expensive and time-consuming to develop and that conservation is the most economically efficient solution to the energy problem.

"U.S. President Carter has said the energy crisis is the moral equivalent of war," Knelman said. "The trouble is, we are all draft dodgers."

Gregory Danake, associate professor of public policy and planning at the college of business and public administration of the University of Arizona at Tucson, said there is a profound lack of understanding of the energy problem in the U.S.

He described the U.S. energy policy as a "kitchen sink" approach, in which every available resource is being thrown at the crisis. Danake said the approach is self-defeating because there is insufficient capital to be spread widely.

The cost of energy produced from nuclear power plants is equivalent to $200 U.S. a barrel of oil, Danake said. The cost of energy from coal plants equals about $150 a barrel of oil and that of synthetic fuels equals about $100 a barrel.

Danake said the U.S. economy faces collapse unless the government formulates national policy goals and objectives for energy use.

John Foster, vice-presidence of Monenco Ltd. of Calgary and chairman of the Canadian Nuclear Association, said nuclear power will be essential for use in the West if the Third World is to have sufficient oil to meet its energy needs.

Foster, who is chairman of the Canadian committee of the World Energy Conference, said the conference has estimated the world could have four times its present energy supplies by the year 2020, of which 30 per cent could come from nuclear power.

But a 10-year hiatus in construction of nuclear power plants could cut world energy supplies in 2020 by 20 per cent, he said.

$100,000 outing for young campers

By PAT DUFOUR

Two 11-year-old upcoast girls have already had a summer to remember.

It all began Friday when Karen Zohar and Michelle Juigmard set out from their homes at Lang Bay, 10 miles south of Powell River for a week of camping.

They had their camping gear stashed in an eight-foot home-made red dinghy, and enough food for a week.

They told their friends they were heading across the strait to Texada Island but they didn't tell their parents.

At 2 p.m. Friday they were reported missing and a full-scale search was launched.

It involved 70 search hours before the youngsters were found about 6 a.m. the following morning.

A Canadian armed forces spokesman said a Buffalo aircraft and Labrador helicopter from CFB Comox searched seven and almost four hours respectively. Search times for four Canadian Coast Guard inflatable rescue craft were 4.2 hours, eight hours, 3.4 hours and 3.7 hours.

Putting in five hours apiece were the private vessels Exodus II, Argonaut, Nishka, Tenga Marine Mobile, Samoyd, Phantom 309 and the RCMP vessels PV Dawson and Bell Nova.

The Canadian Coast Guard hovercraft stationed at the Vancouver International Airport also spent six hours searching.

The girls were found on the beach, one mile from their home. They had changed their minds about crossing the strait.

When discovered, they were gazing skywards, fascinated by the flares being dropped by one of the search planes.

Their escapade cost the taxpayers more than $100,000, it has been unoffcially estimated.

A total of 160 flares were dropped at a cost of $80,000. Flying time was costed out at more than $26,000.

A Canadian Coast Guard spokesman estimated the department's cost at roughly $6,000 while the RCMP's estimate was $200.

Record 37% hike in electricity rate

SEATTLE (AP) — The largest rate hike in the history of Seattle City Light has been approved by city council, adding 37 per cent to the cost of electricity for residential customers.

The rate schedule approved Monday also increases rates by 30 per cent to commercial customers and by 79 per cent to industrial users. It takes effect Aug. 1.

Bob Cowan, City Light finance director, said the increase would average about $65 a year for the utility's 133,166 residential customers who have electric water heating, but other sources of space heating.

The utility is currently seeking to raise the height on the Ross Dam which would flood several thousand hectares in southwestern B.C.

Shakespeare village gives up on Maltwood

The Lord Chamberlain's Players' Society has given up the idea of using the Maltwood property in Royal Oak as a site for a $7 million Shakespearean village.

Society president Simon Deane told Saanich council Monday the 6.7-acre site did not meet the full potential of the project and the lease agreement proposed by Saanich "was not quite what we expected."

He said he regretted the Royal Oak site had to be ruled out but assured aldermen the project is alive and well.

Project manager Brian Lightburn said several other Saanich properties are being considered as well as others in the capital region.

If at all possible, he said the village will be developed somewhere in Greater Victoria.

Lightwood said later Saanich placed too many restrictions on development of the Maltwood site.

"We have all of B.C. to look at as far as a site is concerned," he said, adding there are several interesting possibilities in this area as well as Vancouver.

He said a minimum of 20 acres is needed for development of the village.

Some alderman were concerned the size of the development would destroy the character and visibility of The Thatch, a former restaurant.

Saanich bought the property for $375,000 from the University of Victoria in 1979. The Thatch was the home of the Maltwood family before it was bequeathed to the university as a museum.

So that was summer?

After tying a record warm temperature for July 21 on Monday, Victoria's on-again off-again summer will suffer a slight setback tonight.

Weatherman Norm Dressler said today a weak front coming through the area will drop a cooler air mass on the region.

The forecast comes just as Victorians were beginning to believe summer had arrived.

Temperatures Monday reached 28.1 degrees Celsius in the city and 30 at Pat Bay airport, tying the 1978 record for the same day.

The goods news about tonight's cold front, which will probably be heralded by showers, is that Dressler is sure it's only a temporary setback.

"We should be back in the sun by the weekend with only a few clouds," he said.

Temperatures, however, will be down.

Although Victoria is still in the same warm air mass that made Monday hot, a westerly flow of air across Juan de Fuca Strait developed this morning, cooling the city slightly.

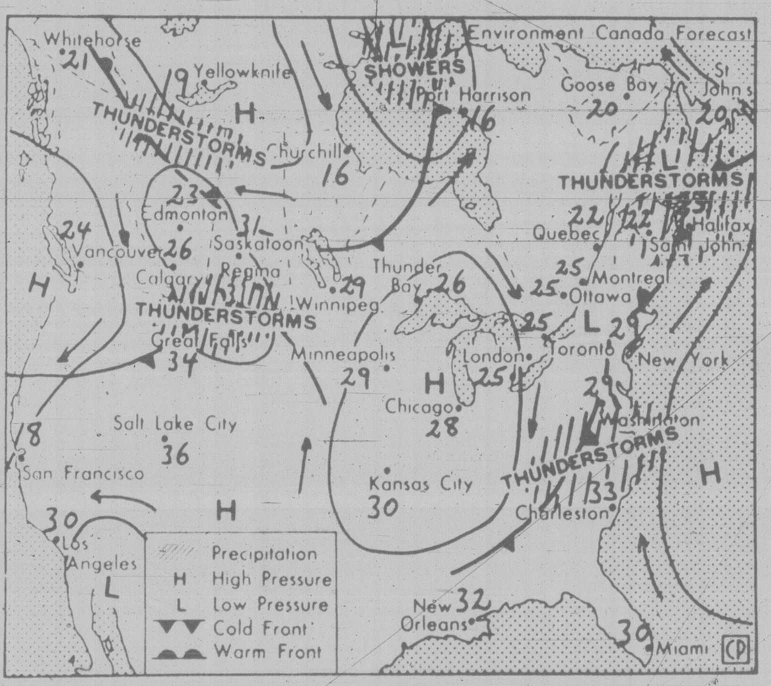
Dumping probe

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc promised in the Commons Monday to find out how the government monitors nuclear waste dumped into the ocean.

But the minister may have a difficult time producing an answer because to date no permits have been issued by the environment department for the marine disposal of atomic waste.

LeBlanc was responding to questions from New Democrat Jim Fulton (Skeena) about radioactive waste that had been dumped at four sites along the West Coast between 1946 and 1965.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency revealed last week that at least 47,000 barrels of nuclear waste had been dropped into the Pacific Ocean by the University of Washington, the University of British Columbia and the old Pacific Naval Laboratory at Esquimalt. About 10,000 of the barrels had burst, spilling the waste onto the ocean floor.



Map valid noon Wednesday

A sunny and warm day Monday over southern B.C. produced some record high temperatures at stations on Vancouver Island. This fair weather pattern will continue today although coastal temperatures will be lower as a westerly flow develops. a frontal system which gave cloud to the north coast and northern interior Monday is continuing to move southeastward However, it will move through the province by Wednesday afternoon resulting in cooler temperatures and more unsettled weather for most sections of B.C.

Denticare unveiling at hand

The provincial government's long-awaited denticare plan will be unveiled Wednesday but it might not be as comprehensive as earlier promised.

Government sources indicated the plan will only cover children up to 14, people over 65 and anyone who now has medical plan payments subsidized by the government.

Premier Bennett had pledged a comprehensive plan that would give some measure of protection to all B.C. residents.

It was not immediately known if the government intends to increase coverage in subsequent years.

It is believed the key section of the plan is to provide a maximum of $700 a year in dental work, including denturists, for those who qualify.

Socreds block NDP bid to debate pipe

Government members refused to allow Opposition Leader Dave Barrett to introduce a motion in the legislature Monday for debate on construction of the prebuild section of the Alaska natural gas pipeline.

Barrett had begun to read the motion supporting the federal NDP's battle in the House of Commons to halt construction of southern Canadian portions of the line when Lands Minister Jim Chabot and Energy Minister Bob McClelland refused to give the unanimous consent necessary for it to be heard.

The motion called for the B.C. government to support the federal NDP and declare its concern over the effect the prebuild will have on the province's natural gas markets. It also urged all federal MPs from B.C. to defend the province's interests over the interests of Alberta gas producers by making every effort to block the prebuild.

The federal government announced Thursday construction of the section of the pipeline which begins in south-central Alberta and branches east to the Saskatchewan-U.S. border and west to the B.C.-U.S. border at Kingsgate, would begin this summer.

Until northern sections of the pipeline are complete, possibly by 1985, the pipeline will be used to ship surplus Alberta gas to U.S. markets normally served by B.C.

McClelland said the federal NDP and his government oppose the prebuild for different reasons.

"The NDP in Ottawa is against selling natural gas and that's the basis of their motion before the house," he said outside the legislature.

"It's obvious to me after the action by the government today that Alberta's calling the tune for British Columbia and Peter Lougheed is getting his way while British Columbia is standing back trying to figure out what to do," Barrett said.

Boy queried in trailer park gunshot injury

Michael David Fowler, 24, was lying down on a bed in his trailer when he heard a popping noise and felt a sharp pain in his head.

He was taken to hospital where he was treated for a bullet wound to the head. Fowler now is reported in stable condition and will undergo surgery for removal of a .22-calibre bullet.

Probation in torching

GRAND FORKS (CP) — Nineteen members of the radical Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect received suspended sentences and three years probation on arson charges when they appeared in provincial court Monday.

Judge Richard D'Andrea said evidence presented by Francis Mealing, acting chairman of the Kootenay committee on inter-group relations, and Greg Cran, committee secretary, indicated the 19 wished to be law-abiding citizens.

The judge said 10 of the accused had previous records for arson-related offences but only one, Pauline Berikoff, had breached probation.

The 19 were charged after a CP Rail shed was burned Sept. 30 at South Slocan, about 25 kilometres west of Nelson.

Since the death in a 1924 rail car explosion of Doukhobor leader Peter (the Lordly) Verigin, Freedomites have said they dynamite and burn railway property to strike back at CP Rail.

The Freedomites say they believe the railway was involved in Verigin's death because his car was uncoupled from a CP Rail train just before the explosion.

During their arson trial, a previously-confidential police file that absolved Freedomites of any blame in Verigin's death was read into the court record.

Defence lawyer Jim Hogan said the 19 were happy that the trial allowed the facts of the 1924 police report to come out.

Before Monday's court session began, a fire broke out in the women's washroom at the courthouse and a Gilpin, B.C., woman was taken into custody. Fire officials said the fire appeared to be deliberately set.

Fire chief Ace Talarico said the fire was burning inside one wall of the room and a wall panel had to be removed to get at the blaze. Damage was minimal. Police evacuated the courthouse for a few minutes.

Hogan told the court that when the washroom fire occurred all 19 accused were together in another room and not responsible for the blaze.

G. H. Gunnarson of Calgary: "I read with interest your column, 'Last Colonials Don't Grasp French Feelings.

"Being a Canadian of non-Anglo descent, I wholeheartedly agree with what you wrote, as the semi-colonial status of Canada is intolerable and must be dealt with before it is too late.

"Our southern neighbours were wise enough to kick the colonial degradation over 200 hundred years ago, although Canada still suffers, especially the non-Anglo Canadians, including the Francophones.

"On the same page as your article, there was another column by Doug Small, which is ironic, and representative of Anglo arrogance!"

W.G. Dobie of Hudson, Que., writes:

"Dear Fother,

"Who art in confusion,

"Helled be thy name,

"For thou art betwixt puberty and putrefaction — 'the dangerous age' — as we who have achieved seniority and wisdom can attest.

"Your recent protestations against the Monarch and our threadbare colonial status must grieve any who remember the good times, when life was simple and uncomplicated, and whose last vestiges you would stamp out, bury without trace, and forget. Ah, the radical dreams of misspent youth.

"Your philosophical bedmate, whom you obviously accept as PET, but who is better described by those among my group down at the Sunset Saloon and Geriatric Gymnasium, because we enjoy the blessings of bilingualism and, thusly, can be infinitely more descriptive.

"Thus, Pierre Elliot Trudeau becomes Pierre Elliot Waterhole and, thrice thusly, we get a much more accurate acronym for the gentleman...PEW!"

Mrs. France Conway of Montreal writes:

"With reference to your column 'The Last Colonials on Earth,' you speak of 'this supposedly independent country' and its need for 'having to ask the permission of another country to do something.'

"You omit to add (something) which is more than likely to be unjust and harmful to Canada as a whole, splintering it and balkanizing it, leaving it weak before its enemies, as we've all seen happen in our own lifetime to the continents of Africa and Asia, and the sub-continent of India.

"To state as if with full truth that another country has to be asked for its permission before we can do just 'something' is patently-wrong information. And this is proven every day at every level of government, the local, the provincial, and the federal.

"We have recently been issued the Malouf Report on the conduct of our chief citizen, who admits to spending irresponsibly millions of money not his own, on a scheme — good, bad or indifferent — for which he had not asked anybody's permission, least of all that of the very taxpayers who have to foot the bill.

"As to the federal level, the government goes ploughing ahead all the time on a multiplicity of issues, without recourse to any referenda at any time, whether it be the matter of re-introduction of capital punishment, and the equally long-standing matter of consultation with the original natives of Canada on sensitive political matters, and notably at this time the matter of repatriating the constitution.

"We are a country whose standard of living even now is the envy of many; our resources are rich and varied, ensuring prosperity for all if justly shared and carefully husbanded.

"We are being stampeded by those who make their easy living stirring up contention, by politicians who always have some axe to grind, into making hasty and irreversible changes — to what? Change is not synonomous with improvement.

"We are, I fear, spoilt darlings of the rich; bored for change, like so many Patty Hearsts — any change, as long as it will bring some novelty into our lives . . ."

Ted W. Culp of Toronto writes:

"I think it is my duty to keep you fully informed about the National Party of Canada. Please note the following information:

"We will try to contest as many federal byelections as is physically possible. At some point in the immediate future 'provincial parties' will be formed in Ontario and Quebec.

"We are hoping Herb Gray will defect to us."

Island pipe survey set

B.C. Hydro will begin a hydrographic survey next month of its proposed natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island.

The six-week program being carried out by ATMEX Geophysics Inc of Montreal will survey selected portions of the sea floor between Roberts Bank, south of Vancouver, and the island.

B.C. Hydro and Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. are competing to build the gas line to the island. Hydro favors a southern route and Westcoast a more northerly route in the vicinity of Powell River.

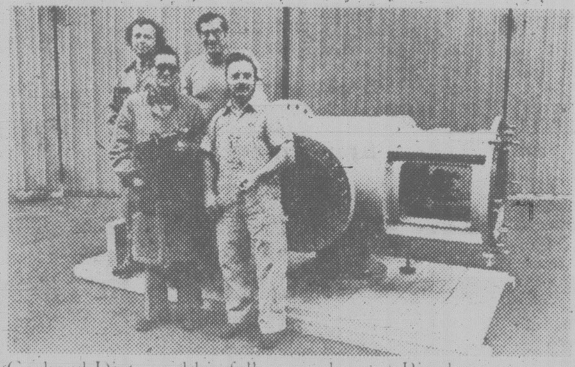
PROFITS MAKE THIS POSSIBLE.

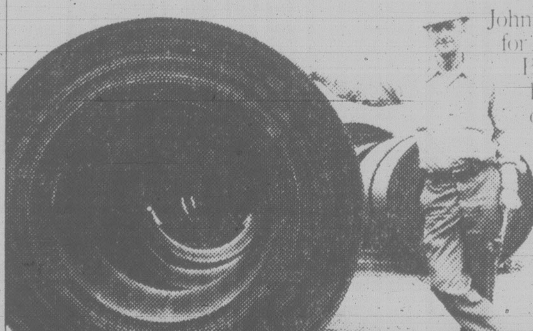
Most of Imperial Oil's investment is used in the search for new energy supplies and to conserve existing supplies. But the effects of our investment go far beyond this. Businesses across Canada benefit as suppliers of goods and services.

When you hear about oil company profits, we hope you will remember oil company investments and how they help create employment.

Here are examples of the many companies we are working with:

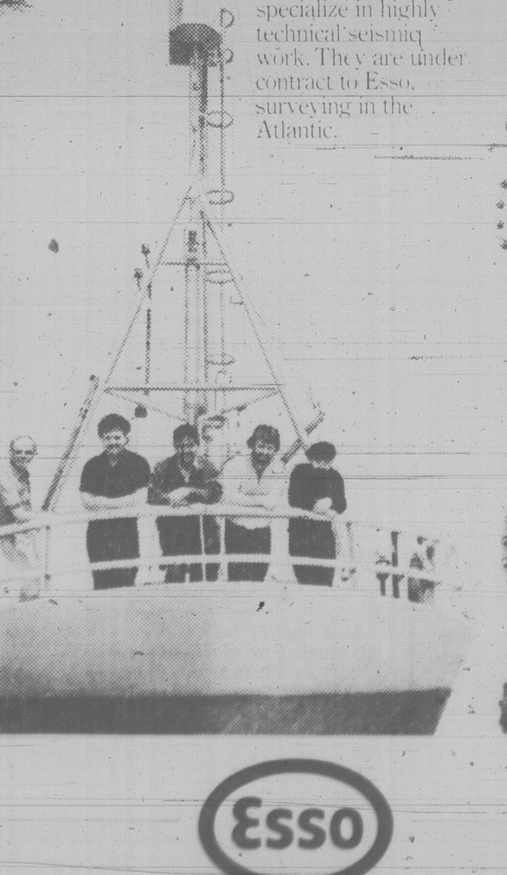


Gerhard Dietz and his fellow workers at Bingham-Willamette Company in Vancouver which manufactures pumps that Esso uses to transport crude oil.

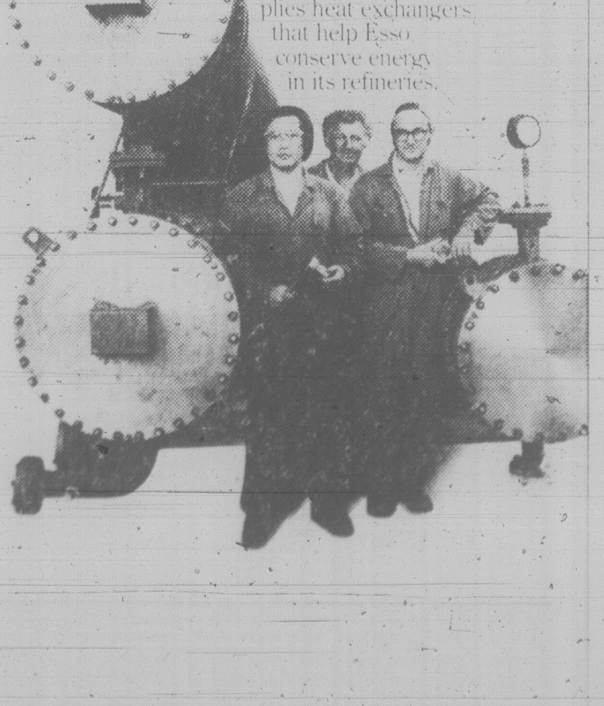


John Bergen, Yard Foreman for Interprovincial Steel and Pipe Corporation in Regina, helps make the pipe we use in our oil fields.

John Thomas, Assembler for Foremost Industries in Calgary, which designs and manufactures all-terrain vehicles used extensively in our exploration and drilling activities.



Dave Ross of Geonautics Company in St. John's and his survey crew specialize in highly technical seismic work. They are under contract to Esso, surveying in the Atlantic.



Kook Hee Kang and his associates work for Muirhead Engineering in Toronto, which supplies heat exchangers that help Esso conserve energy in its refineries.

Going much too far

If Premier Bennett and his cabinet indeed believe that the secession of western Canada is an option to solving their difficulties with Ottawa, then it is time this government sought a new mandate. They were elected to give B.C. good government, but they were not given the right to consider severing our ties with Canada to pursue that goal.

There is a fine line between taking a position merely to gain bargaining clout and actually believing that secession from Canada is an alternative if all else fails.

Alberta threatens to shut off domestic oil supplies, B.C. threatens not to pay a natural gas export tax if one is ever imposed by Ottawa. These are tough bargaining positions. They symbolize the resolve of the participants. And they are perhaps, legitimate in the sense that those making the threats believe they're doing the best for their citizens.

The governments of Alberta and British Columbia can even go so far as to threaten provincial referendums on resource matters. But for B.C. politicians to threaten western separation is clearly crossing the line that has been established by the electorate of the province.

Science and Communications Minister Pat McGeer told reporters this weekend that B.C. for years had been getting the short end of the federal income tax stick. Fair enough. But then he added that if there was any province in confederation with a cause for separation, it was B.C. That is unfounded.

In an open letter to B.C. newspapers, Energy Minister Bob McClelland claimed B.C. would be facing a $750 million tax bill if Ottawa imposed an export tax. Considering that sum is twice the amount the provincial government received from gas exports last year, it is to be hoped he'll write a follow-up letter and explain the discrepancy.

And when he does write, he should avoid a phrase that was included in the first letter. Who is he speaking for when he states "the tax attacks the very fabric of confederation"? The implication from such a remark is clear, but he is not speaking for the majority of British Columbians. A recent Gallup public opinion survey indicates more than 70 per cent of western Canadians wish to remain part of a united Canada.

A page five article carried in the Weekend Times reported that privately some B.C. cabinet ministers are taking a closer look at the separation option than their public positions might indicate. Comments like "we would be the richest country on earth" and "we would be better able to handle the wealth than the Arabs" are symptoms of an attitude that could lead this province in the wrong direction.

One minister said the bottom line could be that either Ottawa backed down or B.C. would separate. "We are willing to risk our government on this."

They should find out if the people of this province are willing to risk their Canadian citizenship.

Whale of a story

Non-whaling nations this week failed to convince the International Whaling Commission to impose a world-wide moratorium on commercial whaling. Canada voted with the whaling nations and one of the reasons can be found on the east coast.

But if the humpback's numbers are threatened, it would take a whale of a fish story to convince Newfoundland inshore fishermen of it. The whales have started appearing in unprecedented numbers on the east coast and are ruining so much fishing gear that some fishermen have threatened to shoot them. Losses last year totalled $500,000 in fishing gear and $2.5 million in lost catches, three per cent of the value of Newfoundland's inshore fishery.

The federal government so far has given $140,000 to a research group to find a whale alarm device to protect fishing gear. But the fishermen say they should be entitled to compensation.

They claim that since Canada is a signatory to the international agreement protecting whales, it should pay the cost of the accord, not 30,000 Newfoundland fishermen.

They've got a point. Perhaps the International Whaling Commission could put some thought towards the negative impact of a war they seem to be winning.

TOM WICKER

Guiding an American fever

DETROIT — Californians chose white straws with rolled brims. Each Texan was resplendent under a sky-blue model with a tall nnesota (which one delegate claimed "has the biggest stock market in the world,") sported white cords in neo-Tom Mix style.

Wherever you looked at the late Republican National Convention, so many cowboy hats were sprouting among the delegates that one irreverent observer was reminded of John Connally's description — perhaTs apocryphal — of George Bush.

"All hat " Connally is supposed to have said, "and no cattle."

But whether or not the remark describes Bush, it should not be applied to the flag-waving convention that nominated him to run with Ronald Reagan and — in Reagan's phrase — "make America great again." For if the cowboy hat has become the badge of a sort of fast-draw John Wayne Americanism, a deeper and more heartfelt patriotism than that seemed to perm the convention and move the delegates most profoundly.

Paying homage

When the band played "God Bless America," the crowd never failed to take up the lyrics (curiously enough, the only other tune that evoked comparable enthusiasm was "Dixie") and few of the endless speakers neglected a ritual bow to the greatness of the nation and its people, however diminished by Democrats, liberals and others of little faith.

"It is," said the presidential nominee himself, "impossible to capture in words the splendor of this vast continent which God has granted as our portion of His creation. There are no words to express the extraordinary strength and character of this breed of people we call Americans." Or, as Gerald Ford put it less elegantly:

"There is nothing the American people cannot do when we try ... let's never doubt America's greatness ... let's start talking like winners and being winners. That's the real spirit of America."

And Jesse Helms of North Carolina, denying that Americans concerned themselves with politics, told enthusiastic listeners: "The American people are interested only in what is right and what is wrong."

Patriotic excess is a staple of political gatherings, of course; but what was being heard here — particularly in the roaring response to such self-congratulatory tributes — seemed more nearly a cry from the heart.

Speaker after speaker touched the same chords: America once was the greatest nation in history ("the freest, most prosperous and generous society on the face of the earth," as Jack Kemp of New York put it); but it has been weakened and misled by fools and knaves ("the direct political, personal and moral responsibility of Democratic Party leadership," Reagan said).

Now the nation has to be made great again by a properly led people ("We just need to remember who we are," Ford declared — "the most blessed, the most creative, the freest, the most optimistic people on the face of this earth."). But if Republicans don't provide the necessary leadership, the end is in sight ("This might be the last Republican convention," Barry Goldwater warned). Thus, from Reagan on down, the Republican campaign was invariably described as a "crusade."

Inevitably, the "greatness" theme found military expression, as in the Republican platform call for armed "superiority" over the Soviet Union. And the delegates exploded in approval when Reagan declared that he would regard his election "as proof that we have renewed our resolve to preserve world peace and freedom" — a low-keyed version of John Kennedy's inaugural resolve to "support any friend, oppose any foe" to preserve liberty.

The emotions thus evoked do not seem to me superficial or "superpatriotism" or mere nostalgia for better days. No doubt some of the politicians who played upon this theme did so with calculation — just as Jimmy Carter used to intone in 1976 that "all we need is a government as good as the people."

But those delegates singing "God Bless America" in the Joe Louis Arena, I believe, were expressing genuine shock, bafflement, anger — not because of a failure of faith but because faith sustains them still against economic decline, against energy shortages, against an unpopular U.S.-Soviet power balance repeatedly described here as American military inferiority. The delegates refused to accept that any of those conditions would exist — even the "giveaway" of the Panama Canal — except for "failures of leadership," mostly Democratic.

Blindspot

This dogged belief in American "greatness," this football fan's insistence that "We're Number One" — or should be — may reflect, to some extent, a refusal to face or understand unpleasant facts, as well as a search for scapegoats. That does not make it any the less sincere, or important as a political condition; it is the state of mind of a great number of Americans with as much right to be heard as any, and upon whom the Reagan "crusade" is solidly based.

How he guides that state of mind — undoubtedly his own — and how his opponents respond will surely be the most important questions of the campaign.

Victoria Landmarks

One day in November, 1907, John C. Olmstead, the famous landscape architect from Massachusetts, registered at Victoria's plush Driard Hotel. His task was to design a residential park to be located on the 465-acre Uplands Farm land purchased from the Hudson's Bay Company.

There was both a physical and a financial remoteness about the venture. The late Arthur O. Noakes of Victoria camped on site to conduct surveys and, with the best lots priced at $55,000, development was so slow that even by 1925 only sixteen homes had been built.

In spite of financial woes of the developers, the initial very high standards were maintained. Some restrictions were fact; others were not. Horse stables had to be at least 50 feet from lot boundaries, but a by-law to regulate clotheslines was never passed.

About half the present 500 homes were built in the 1950s and in-filling is virtually complete. However, thanks to the earlier dispersed development, the restrictions, and the mix of styles and ages, Uplands has assumed an unique and enduring character.

RICHARD GWYN

Piping concern westward

OTTAWA — If "Paris is worth a mass," which is how the Protestant Prince Henry justified his conversion to Catholicism in order to become King of France, then the give-away of 2.3 trillion cubic feet of natural gas to the U.S., perhaps is worth it as a way for Ottawa to appease the West.

Aside from the companies involved, the beneficiary of the deal will be Prime Minister Trudeau. He'll now be able to meet Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed to haggle over oil prices while wearing the halo of the champion of western interests against a lunatic fringe of eastern Canadian economic nationalists, and of New Democrats.

The losers in the deal will be the rest of us. Once again, in that drearily familiar way, Canadian resources are being humped across the border to the first bidder. As familiarly and as drearily, this fire-sale is being justified on the grounds of the short-term jobs it will create — "150,000 man-years", which is one of those meaningless estimates pencilled on the back of an envelope.

About face

The deal itself involves a switch of political beliefs as considerable as Prince Henry's switch of religious beliefs. Last December, Energy Minister Marc Lalonde, then in opposition, described the deal as "the biggest sell-out in Canadian history". Now he says, "There can be no doubt that our national interest lies in proceeding with it."

There are, it doesn't need to be said, abundant doubts about the project.

For one thing, the deal contains no provision for a "swap", that is for a commitment by the U.S. to provide us later with the same amount of gas at the same price if by then our own natural gas supplies are running low, or, as is more likely to happen, that we are running out of cheap gas.

At a press conference, Economic Development Minister Bud Olson said he had "raised" the possibility of a swap while in Washington but had made no attempt "to make it a condition of the deal." We had so large a surplus of gas, he said, "we really don't need swaps."

We do indeed have a surplus of gas, and the companies which found the stuff, many of them small, independent Canadian ones, do need additional sales to cover their exploration costs. We don't, though, have a surplus of cheap gas: Most of the new discoveries have been in the high cost, Deep Basin region of Alberta and B.C.

MARC LALONDE
. . .better to proceed

For another thing, exporting Canadian gas to the U.S., will delay the Alaska gas pipeline, intended to bring U.S. gas from the North Slope of Alaska, across Canada, down to the "Lower 48" markets. This project, of which the "prebuild" pipeline approved by the government this week is nominally a part, is so vast ($23 billion) that it will indeed bring considerable economic benefits to Canada, such as orders for pipeline to keep our steel mills humming.

The U.S. now will be able to rely upon Canadian gas as a substitute for its own, northern gas. The "prebuild" line will pump up to 1.35 million cubic feet a day of gas across the border for the next seven years. You can take for granted that come 1986 more exports will be authorized, as analternative to an empty pipeline and to U.S. customers freezing in the dark.

So, for the sake of a relatively small number of construction jobs today (the "pre-build" line, from southern Alberta to the U.S. border, is short, and so will generate few orders for pipelines) we have delayed, perhaps indefinitely, the far more economically attractive Alaska gas pipeline. We have also committed ourselves to long-term gas exports, without the protection of a "swap" arrangement in the event we discover that our supplies for our own needs are running low.

Officials opposed

Interestingly, the reason the cabinet took so long to approve the project was because of opposition, not from ministers but from officials in the Energy Department, and, goes the word, in PetroCanada. Politicians, of their nature, worry about jam today; it's the job of officials to worry whether there'll be enough jam for tomorrow.

For the politicians, the jammy part of the deal isn't the "considerable economic benefits" of the prebuild project, in Lalonde's phrase, although these make for good public relations guff. Instead, the considerable benefit of the project is strictly political — to send a signal to the West that Ottawa, really and truly, cares.

The one unanswered question is whether Edmonton, like Paris, really is worth a mass. Or, to bring history up to date, is worth a mosque.

Hospital beds

It is my understanding that the B.C. health ministry has been receiving of late a number of letters asking for assistance in getting some sort of priority for a citizen who is suffering from cataracts and is due for an eye operation. There are a number of taxpayers and medicare premium-payers out there in just that situation waiting for elective surgery of one sort or another. Earlier this year my wife was amongst them; she had her bed reservation cancelled on the very day she was to have gone into hospital. I was fortunate enough to get her admitted in Ottawa where the situation is still not as bad as it is in British Columbia. Regrettably, not everyone is in that happy position of being able to choose between provinces.

While I was looking for a solution to this difficult and quite unacceptable situation, and a means to bring relief to those waiting for hospital space, I learned that there was something in the order of 100 to 150 beds in Victoria hospitals being occupied by extended patients who might, more appropriately, be accommodated elsewhere, thereby opening up space for those who are due for what is now described as "elective" surgery.

I can think of at least two public school buildings in the Saanich/Esquimalt area which are not now occupied. They are boarded up, and school boards might be prepared to rent them for a nominal sum to hospital boards to provide more extended care space in the Greater Victoria area. It will obviously take public funds to remodel these erstwhile schools and adapt them for extended or even intermediate-care patients. The public, however, is already paying for health care through taxes and premiums. That same public, I hasten to add, is not always getting the health care as and when needed because the appropriate hospital facilities are just not available. — Don Munro, MP, Esquimalt-Saanich.

Loose talk

I note with some interest an item which appeared in Town Talk on June 20. The article is unfair and inaccurate when it alleges that a great many federal cabinet ministers announce their coming to Victoria and, then, "nine times out of ten the cabinet minister begs off, apparently as part of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's policy of paying more attention to the west without actually going there."

This is the kind of journalistic mischief which can only serve to fan the fires of misunderstanding in this country.

Indeed, more ministers have visited Victoria in recent months than at any comparable period of time and most of them have arrived on schedule.

On the basis of this column, at least, Town Talk should be renamed Loose Talk. — Senator R.J. Perrault, Leader of the Government in the Senate.

Family law

I am appalled at the lightness with which our provincial and federal "leaders" are approaching the very serious matter of family law in their present constitutional negotiations. It has been passed off to non-elected officials as a simple issue, yet the horrendous tangle of family laws in the various provinces reveals a problem deserving of more than cursory consideration.

A woman who marries in a province which has fairly non-sexist marriage and property laws, may, upon moving to another province, be shocked to find that in her new home province she is considered little more than her husband's chattel. Provincial welfare rolls boast thousands of women (and men) forced onto public assistance after a supporting ex-spouse leaves the province and gets beyond the reach of the courts concerned. Divorced parents with custody of children have little or no recourse if their children are abducted by a spouse and taken out of the province.

Family law is an issue which touches everyone, especially low income people and single parents, people who have very little say in, and little energy to spend on, these constitutional debates which to them must seem far away from the reality of life as they know it.

The federal politicians seem all too willing to toss family law off to the provinces as a negotiating ploy. The provincial politicians are so hungry for individual power and control that they refuse to work together on this, a most universal issue.

Gentlemen (and women), your priorities are showing . . . and they're not pretty. — Karen D. Muzychka, 1-949 Convent Place.

Who spies?

After the months of talk in Iran about spies among the American hostages, I would very much like to ask the Iranians if none of their diplomats in foreign countries do any spying?

Women in rage over third world rites

By JILL TWEEDIE
London Observer

The conservative estimate is 30 million and some researchers claim more than double that number: the women and girls in many African and Middle Eastern countries who are what is politely called "circumcised" and, more accurately, "genitally mutilated."

That is to say, they have suffered all manner of injury — psychological, physical and sexual — because of customs that decree the alteration of the female body to suit male tradition and male sexual imperatives.

Many people argued over the years that the practice did not exist. When enough evidence was produced to the contrary, they argued that it was rare.

When overwhelming evidence was produced to the contrary, they switched their argument and attacked on three fronts: that girls regard it as a rite of womanhood and tribeswomen carry it out; that legislation against it won't help; that any interference from the outside world is "cultural imperialism."

Evils of our own

There is some truth in all these arguments. Some, but not a lot. Any deeply-ingrained ritual comes to seem "natural" and virtuous, however basically evil — we in the West have examples of our own. Witch-burning was a positive good in its time. Capital punishment still is, in some American states.

The women who carry out circumcision do so because they fear girls will be considered unclean and unmarriageable by the men upon whom they are forced to depend; besides, they have a living to earn. And it is true that circumcision is widespread in, for instance, the Sudan, despite legislation against it in 1946. But, as most of us know to our cost, legislation without public awareness or education is a paper tiger, serving only to shelve problems in the odor of sanctity.

The last argument, that we have no right to interfere in what doesn't concern us, particularly if the subject has an ancient tradition, is powerful, daunting and fits neatly into an aspect of liberal thinking. It is, however, specious.

Certainly, nothing could be more counter-productive than hordes of incensed Western women at the current Copenhagen conference antagonizing those Third World women already on the warpath by howling for an end to circumcision now, because we say so. That might have happened a few years ago but is much less likely now.

Gloria Steinem, in March, urged American participants to be cautious. "Never," she said, "has it been more vital for our feminist rage to be balanced with tactical effectiveness."

But the real point is that Western "feminist rage" is already shared by an increasing number of Third World women who themselves abhor circumcision in whatever form and count on our solidarity only for the initiatives they have already taken without us.

They ensured that the abolition of genital mutilation was recommended at the 1979 Sudan World Health Organization conference, recommended again at Cairo in 1979, and yet again at the 1980 African regional conference, a preliminary to Copenhagen.

There are, of course, some women who actively support the status quo and many men — including men in Western development agencies — who cite "ethnic integrity" as a reason for doing nothing. But since the male political leaders of the countries concerned are often only too happy to discard their own ethnic integrity in exchange for anything, from color television and large cars to Western dress, one cannot take their worries too seriously.

Fran Hosken, the major and indefatigable American campaigner against female circumcision, has already put in almost a decade's work bringing the practice to Western attention and supporting Third World women who want change. She has trekked across most of the countries in question and tirelessly recorded case history after case history, fact after fact, and been mightily abused for her efforts.

Continue campaign

She is in Copenhagen this month to continue the campaign, infuriated at the continuing failure of many Wester-funded aid agencies to implement Third World resolutions or include the hazards of circumcision in their health, education, training and family planning programs.

Hosken is particularly distressed by findings that make her believe some governments and doctors are responding to charges of female injury by taking the operation out of the hands of unhygienic village midwives and establishing it as an accepted part of a system of Western surgery to be done hygienically with needles instead of thorns, in hospitals. Is this, she asks despairingly, progress?

Victims of 'male traditions and sexual imperatives'

Hosken, like many fighting pioneers, eschews tact. She is an obsessive blunderbuss, a determined steam-roller who, almost single-handedly, has taken Amrican opinion by the neck and shaken it. Sore necks have resulted. Sore necks have been deserved. Wishing to change any corner of the world never won any popularity contests and no pioneers expect popularity, which is just as well.

Edna Adan Ismail, a member of the health ministry of Somalia, understands the value of tact. She took up the cause "because, as a midwife, I saw for myself, day after day, how damaging circumcision is to women and their children." Nevertheless, she is — as are a number of Third World women — wary of certain aspects of Western feminist concern.

"Circumcision," she says, "cannot be discussed in isolation. It must be treated as part of the general health of women and their daughters. When I talk about it at home, I always talk to couples, never to men or women separately. If I did, the men would blame the women and the women the men.

"And I never mention any of the more abstract feminist arguments about male oppression or female sexuality. The whole area is too remote from village people, too sensitive, pointless. I simply insist that, like some other habits, circumcision is bad for the health of little girls, bad for women and bad for the babies they bear.

Mutual concern

"In that way, men and women are not set against each other but brought together in mutual concern for their children."

Her tactics seem eminently sensible and practical. There are a growing number of men, husbands and fathers in the Third World who also dislike circumcision and yet fail to persuade their womenfolk against it. One Somalian women told me she was circumcised while her father was away because her mother and grandmother both knew he would forbid it, had he been at home.

It is such men — and women with the views of Edna Adan — who require our support and we should refuse to be warned away, as we frequently are, by too many international agencies who, after a ritual condemnation of circumcision, ritually add threat of "backlash reaction" to what they always call "well-intentioned outside interference."

Can lead to death

The fact is that, for far too long, government and charity-aided agencies have devoted themselves to a myriad different aspects of Third World health, often with particular emphasis on the health and education of women and children, and yet have managed, with consummate skill, to ignore and even officially deny, the practice of circumcision which, all by itself, undermines their every lesson by condemning women to a lifetime of debilitating infections, painful intercourse, difficult childbirth and even to their death and the death of their offspring.

Since it is our money and our taxes that fund these agencies, have we not a right to expect that their health education programs include circumcision instead of pretending it doesn't exist and thus failing women like Edna Adan?

In order to help, we can press for the changes that Third World women want, themselves, by supporting, in writing, agencies like the World Health Organization and UNICEF who have changed their policies and now need our encouragement to implement resolutions.

We can also make sure that any charities we back who work in the Third World know our view on female circumcision.

Then, after Copenhagen, we can ask for the implementation of decisions tht will doubtless be taken there by the women of Africa and the Arab countries who are, themselves, affected by circumcision and fear for their daughters.

A disgraceful appetite

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — A bum comes into a saloon, sits down at the bar, picks up a crabcake off the plate, two crackers and the jar of mustard.

"What do you think you're doing?" says the bartender.

"Helping myself to the free lunch," says the bum.

"If you don't want to be tossed out of here, you buy a beer and you pay for the crabcake. There's no such thing as free lunch," says the bartender.

The bum is about to leave when a fat guy lumbers in. "Give me the free lunch," says the fat guy. "Six crabcakes, two pigs knuckles, a dill pickle and a schooner of beer."

"Right away," says the bartender, and gives him the food. The bum says, "I thought you said there's no free lunch. How come you're giving it to the fat guy?"

"Not that it's any of your business," says the bartender, "but that guy happens to be Bunker Hunt. He just led the big silver expedition that went bust and he's short of dough."

"So am I," says the bum.

"Yeah," says the bartender, "but if that guy don't eat, bankers and brokers all over the neighborhood are going bankrupt. If you don't eat, all it means is there's one guy less to get indigestion. Now beat it, moocher."

★ ★ ★

The bum heads for the door, but just then a big crowd of men in $700 suits comes trooping through, and the bum is pinned against the bar. One of the fancy-tailored guys says to the bartender, "Free lunch for everybody wearing a $700 suit."

"Free lunch coming right up," says the bartender.

The bum looks at the guy who just did the ordering. "Don't I know you?" the bum asks. "Wouldn't be surprised," says the guy. "I am a highly elected official of the United States government."

"Well," the guy says to the bum, "that doesn't identify me very well, does it, since almost everybody in Washington is always saying there's no free lunch."

The bum looks at the guys in elegant suits who are wolfing down the three crabcakes and the pigs knuckles. "How come you suspended the rules for these guys?" he asks.

"Those guys, as you call them," says the politician, "happen to be the Chrysler Corp., and they've just lost their shirts, neckties, shoes and pants."

★ ★ ★

The bum says they look pretty well dressed to him. Naturally, says the politician, the government had to give them free wardrobes so they wouldn't look like bums when the government took them out for free lunch.

"How about sneaking me a free pigs knuckle?" the bum says to the politician, "as I just lost my wallet?"

"Friend," says the politician, "the loss of your wallet is not going to put so many people out of work in the state of Michigan that it could get a lot of us politicians dis-elected."

"Just a free cracker," pleads the bum.

"There is no free lunch," says the politician, "and you ought to be ashamed of yourself for asking. What would the founding fathers think?"

The bum moves toward the door, filling his stomach with the aroma of pigs knuckles and crabcakes and big talk about how the Japanese can't make a mustard that's in the same class with American mustard.

Just then the door pops open and a big, smiley guy comes in and grabs the bum by his lapels. "Where are you going?" says the guy. "You can't walk out now. It's free lunch time."

The bum recognizes this guy right away, because the newspaper he slept under on the park bench last night had the guy's picture in it. "You're Ronald Reagan," the bum says.

Reagan grins modestly. "Then there really is free lunch," says the bum.

"Free lunch," says Reagan, "is the only thing that can beat inflation and stop the recession."

"You're kidding," says the bartender.

"No, my friend," says Reagan, "all working people, if given free lunch, will have more money to spend on goods, which in turn will speed up industrial production, which in turn will pour more money into the marketplace and the Treasury."

"You heard the man," the bum says to the bartender. "Give me the free lunch."

★ ★ ★

"I heard him," says the bartender, "and what he said was free lunch for working people. You got a job?"

"I'm looking," says the bum.

"There's no free lunch," says the bartender, tossing the bum into the street.

On his way out, Reagan stops to comfort the bum who is sitting on the curb. "Don't feel bad," he says. "After the free lunch gets going full blast, it will create plenty of job opportunities."

"You got mustard all over your necktie," says the bum. "Just let me chew on it a little bit."

Hewitt firm: no rate increase

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. will remain firm in its refusal to increase the 1980 rate it pays auto body repair shops, a letter from the minister responsible for ICBC indicates.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt's letter, written last week to the Automotive Retailers Association, said rates had been discussed at an ICBC board meeting, "and the directors concurred with management that the rate of $25.60 an hour was a realistic rate for 1980."

The letter adds that "there would appear to be no reason to further review this matter," though Hewitt suggests that the association "look forward to constructive discussion regarding the establishment of a 1981 rate when the annual review takes place."

Some repair shops have been charging customers as much as $6 an hour more than the ICBC rate, claiming they cannot make a reasonable profit on what the corporation pays.

However, a major independent body shop operator contends the shops leading the fight for higher rates want more money because they are not efficient.

Brian Bignell, owner of Capri Autobody's two shops in Burnaby and Coquitlam, says he makes a reasonable profit at ICBC rates because he does not have unnecessary overhead.

Bignell withdrew from the Automotive Retailers' Association Monday, contending the campaign for higher rates is led by organizations "run by the big dealers" — which, he contends, have unnecessary managers and clerical staff.

"If I can run two locations, turn over $1.7 million, make a reasonable return and guarantee my work, why can't they?" he asks, and answers: "Because they're overstaffed with managers and front-end staff."

Double killing trial slated

NANAIMO (CP) — Charles Joseph Lynn, 47, was committed in Nanaimo provincial court Monday to stand trial on two counts of first degree murder.

Lynn is charged with the Dec. 24, 1979, murders of Jason Alder Scott and Lynn's estranged wife Ethnea Mary Lynn, both of Nanaimo.

A trial date will be set this fall.

Nurses, feds settle for new contract

OTTAWA (CP) — A proposed contract settlement between the federal government and about 1,600 nurses has been reached following three months of conciliation and mediation, the Public Service Staff Relations Board announced Monday.

Details of the settlement were not released by any of the parties pending a ratification vote with a deadline of Aug. 12.

The nurses, whose contract expired last Dec. 23 were seeking a 12 per cent wage increase each year in a two-year contract to bring their minimum annual salary to $20,013.

The nurses, represented by the Professional Institute of the Public Service, are those employed in the penitentiaries, veterans hospitals, defence establishments, health centres on Indian reservations and in remote communities.

Speaker's edict leaves MLAs fit to be tied

Someone in the B.C. legislature is fit to be tied, and deputy speaker Walter Davidson figures it should be the honorable male members.

Davidson ruled Monday that male MLAs must continue to wear ties, shirts and jackets in the legislature, despite the long-awaited arrival of hot summer temperatures.

His ruling followed some off-the-cuff remarks from government members about Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert) who showed up in the legislature without a tie and Emery Barnes (NDP — Vancouver Centre) who appeared without a jacket.

Lea complained that because the Speaker's ruling does not apply to the six women members it contravenes the Constitutions Act, which says all members of the legislature must be treated equally.

"It's a bit silly in July and August to say to people you have to wear a tie," Lea said outside the legislature, while conceding he will wear a tie today.

"I think you should be dressed neatly, you should be dressed cleanly, and I think that should be the extent of it."

Barnes, who was often garbed in caftans in his first year as a politician, asked Davidson to further define what constitutes a shirt, a jacket and a tie.

Mite frustrated but talks go on

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations between the Construction Labor Relations Association and its unions, which resumed Monday, are progressing as well as can be expected, says association president Chuck McVeigh.

"Everybody's a little frustrated, but we're still talking."

McVeigh, whose association acts as bargaining agent for 800 firms, said there are some difficulties, but "If we didn't the mediators wouldn't be there."

Labor Minister Jack Heinrich appointed mediators Clark Gilmour and Bob Almgren on July 11, a move which made strike or lockout action illegal until they report out of the talks.

At issue are wages and a demand by the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council for a clause allowing union members to walk off a job site if workers not affiliated with the council come on the site.

Lid kept on bathtub rowdies

NANAIMO (CP) — RCMP reported a quiet bathtub race weekend although there were 129 arrests, most for intoxication.

Insp. George Strathdee said Monday damp weather and better management prevented a repeat of rowdier bathtub weekends.

Damage to public and private property was minimal and arrests were down from previous years.

Fire danger low to moderate

Only four new forest fires were reported during the weekend and the forest fire danger is generally low to moderate throughout the province, the B.C. forests ministry said Monday.

There were 55 fires burning in the province. So far this year, 1,019 fires have been reported, the ministry said.

RR buffs get deadline extension.

KELOWNA (CP) — The Kettle Valley Railway Heritage Society has been given more time to raise funds to save a section of the historic railway through the Okanagan Valley.

CP Rail now has agreed to hold off demolition of 10 kilometres of abandoned track until July 28 while the society tries to secure funds.

The society is trying to raise $500,000 to make the railway operational as a tourist attraction.

RCMP answer translater charge

OSOYOOS (CP) — RCMP in British Columbia have French translators available but they don't attend every minor traffic accident, a spokesman said Monday.

He was responding to reports that a Quebec couple involved in an accident in the B.C. Interior had trouble communicating with RCMP.

Yves Richard and Carole Pelletier, who said they were were in the province looking for work as fruit pickers, described their B.C. trip as a nightmare.

They said officers investigating the accident would not answer questions or get a French translator. Miss Pelletier said police ignored her even though she was slightly hurt.

RCMP said they checked accident reports in Osoyoos, Oliver and Kelowna in the Okanagan Valley but found no record of any accident involving the couple. The spokesman noted the B.C. Interior is a large area.

The earlier report from Quebec City did not specify where or when the accident occurred.

Frightening picture painted of Que. air safety

QUEBEC (CP) — Airlines refuse to admit they are constantly compromising on safety in order to improve profit figures, says a senior official of the federal transport department.

Andre Paulin, the department's Quebec regional superintendant for accident investigation, told a federal air safety inquiry Monday that airlines exert considerable pressure on aviation professionals to avoid postponing flights because delays cost money.

"The smaller the company, the greater the tendency to ignore safety," Paulin said in testimony before Mr. Justice Charles Dubin of the Ontario Court of Appeal, the lone commissioner on the federal inquiry into aviation safety.

Pilots sometimes take off despite technical deficiencies or less-than-ideal weather conditions, Paulin said, adding that "an accident doesn't cost anything to an operator because all their losses are covered by insurance, but this isn't the case if a flight is cancelled."

The vast majority of accidents could be avoided if there were more adequate inspections of aircraft and surveillance of operations, Paulin said. Transport Canada must shoulder much of the blame for lax enforcement of rules, inadequate training, thoughtless regulations, undermanning of inspection services, poor weather forecasts and a lack of proper bilingual services, he added.

One of the main problems is that the accident investigation branch is constantly undermanned, meaning that only 39 per cent of accidents can be investigated in person, he said. The rest of them must be handled by telephone and those reports tend to be inaccurate.

Paulin also criticized Transport Canada for not hiring extra personnel in the Quebec region, where employees are saddled with extra work because of bilingualism requirements.

Also heard Monday was Pierre Menard, a Quebecair pilot hired as an investigator by the inquiry, who said a small Quebec airline called Golfair Quebec Ltee. operated for years in flagrant violation of most basic regulations. The company operated a charter service as well as flights on scheduled routes between small cities in eastern Quebec.

Menard said in a report that the firm consistently flew overloaded aircraft, had incomplete logbooks, sometimes lacked flight plans and used defective planes and improperly-trained pilots.

Menard told of complaints sent to Transport Canada by passengers, including one about an incident at Mont-Joli airport in October, 1978, involving a DC-3 aircraft with 28 passengers about to take off for Lac Ste-Anne.

"On takeoff, the door of the aircraft opens," the complaint said. "Return to the airport. The door is closed. New departure. The door opens a second time.

"Return to the terminal. The passengers want to get off because they're scared. The captain doesn't want to and convinces them to stay aboard, saying: 'We'll fix this up.'

"He wants to tie the door with belts to the seat of a passenger, who refuses. The door is attached to the floor. Departure for Lac Ste-Anne 130 miles to the north."

Another passenger complained of flying in a Golfair plane with three holes in the ceiling above her seat.

A study of logbooks showed consistent overloading of Golfair DC-3s, which have a maximum load of 26,200 pounds. In one case, a DC-3 took off with an extra 6,000 pounds.

"I've never flown a DC-3 but a 6,000-pound overload is pretty incredible," Menard said.

The Baie Comeau firm was sold in March to Air Gava Ltee. of Schefferv lle, Que.

The inquiry also heard from Laurent Chartier, Quebec's top civil aviation administrator, who described as "deplorable" an internal investigation by air traffic controllers into a complaint by the pilot of a British Airways Boeing 747.

The pilot said he was involved in a near-miss with a small plane while approaching Montreal's Mirabel International Airport last month.

"To me, this is a joke," Chartier said about the report. He testified earlier that the system of allowing controllers to hold their own inquiries inevitably ends up as a whitewash of those involved.

Legalized marijuana? Forget it, Kaplan says

TORONTO (CP) — The government has no intention of legalizing marijuana use, Solicitor-General Bob Kaplan said Monday.

Kaplan, speaking on the issue at a Liberal fund-raising dinner here, said a bill to reduce penalties for simple possession will be introduced this fall.

"The distributional offences of trafficking and importing will continue to attract severe penalties and rigorous enforcement," he added.

The government's promise in the throne speech last March to reduce penalties had brought about more letters and telephone calls than anything else in the speech, he said.

The major concern appeared to be that the government was "condoning" the use of marijuana.

Kaplan said this is not so. Pressure to change the law stemmed from the fact that using criminal law to discourage marijuana use has meant a high cost to society "with very little return."

More than 200,000 Canadians had criminal records as a result of convictions for simple possession.

As a result, many were running into trouble getting a variety of jobs. Kaplan gave the example of a man who had earned a job with the Toronto Parking Authority as a "ticketer" but was prevented from taking it because of a simple conviction for possession.

Kaplan said the rate of cannabis use does not appear to be affected by reduction of penalties in the United States, where some states have eased the law while others have not.

Schreyer chopper has forced landing

WHITEHORSE (CP) — A forced landing on a remote Klondike mining road last week when a helicopter engine broke down caused a few moments of anxiety for Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer and his family during their first visit to the Yukon.

Schreyer, his wife, Lily, and two of their children were on an afternoon tour of the Klondike gold fields near Dawson City last Monday when a throttle linkage failed, disabling the helicopter.

George Gibson, who was acting as guide on the tour, said in an interview Monday the pilot was unable to gain height because of the malfunction and flew five kilometres down a valley before finding a road where he could land safely.

$1.9B April deficit

OTTAWA (CP) — The government recorded a budgetary deficit of $1.9 billion in April, the first month of 1980 financial operations, the finance department said Monday.

Budgetary revenues were $1.9 billion and expenditures were $3.9 billion, both higher than a year ago.

However, government accounting changes effective in April record net spending of revolving funds as budgetary rather than non-budgetary costs.

The effect of transactions in April produced a government cash balance of $2 billion compared with $3.4 billion a year earlier.

Oil tanker splits, fouls Netherlands port

ROTTERDAM (UPI) — A giant oil tanker carrying 157,000 tons of light crude broke in two and partially sank in Rotterdam's Europort today, spilling some of the volatile fuel and forcing the world's largest port to temporarily close.

Deputy Port Director Christiaan van Krimpen said the 212,000-ton Energy Concentration, which ruptured with an explosive sound, split in two because the centre tanks were unloaded before the fore and aft tanks, putting too much weight on the ends of the 1,069-foot tanker.

Port officials said about 10 tons of light crude spilled into the Caland Canal oil port about 19 kilometres inland from the North Sea coast. It did not appear any fuel was leaking from the split halves.

A port official responsible for the control of dangerous cargoes said gas from the evaporating light crude could explode but that he was "confident" it would be contained without danger.

It was at first believed an explosion ripped through the very large crude carrier, but Van Krimpen said the blast-like sound was the from the ship cracking.

The 43 Chinese crewmen aboard the tanker, owned by United Petroleum Carriers inc., of Hong Kong, escaped. One was being treated at hospital for breathing difficulties.

Port officials said the Energy Concentration arrived Monday night from the Persian Gulf, carrying 54,000 tons of the volatile light crude for Mobil Oil in Rotterdam and an additional 103,000 tons for a British port.

The port was closed until daybreak as a precaution and floating booms were set up to contain the spilled fuel.

Five coastal patrol vessels equipped for fire-fighting and pollution control as well as two special spill-control vessels were involved in mopping up, Van Krimpen said.

Rotterdam's Europort, the busiest port in the world and Western Europe's most important oil terminal, is an inland harbor.

The worst oil spill was in July, 1979, when the Aegean Captain and Atlantic Empress collided in the Carribean, spilling more than 250,000 tons of oil.

The last major oil tanker disaster killed nearly 50 crew and dock workers in Bantry Bay, Ireland, in January, 1979.

MONTREAL (CP) — After reading that whales are partial to the tuba, Montreal zoologist Gerald Iles wondered if they might get an even bigger kick out of Scottish bagpipe music.

Next month, Iles will have a piper aboard ship on one of his regular whale-sighting expeditions on the St. Lawrence near the mouth of the Saguenay River, about 500 kilometres downriver from here.

"It's a serious attempt to see if the great whales react to bagpipe music," said Iles, who's been heading the weekend trips for whale-lovers for the past nine years.

The volunteer piper is 17-year-old Ewen Booth of Blainville, Que., who wished he'd brought his pipes along on a whale-sighting trip last September and mentioned it to Iles.

Booth, a member of the 78th Regiment of the Fraser Highlanders, plans to serenade the whales with several numbers, including Amazing Grace.

Iles has spotted at least seven species of whales on 22 St. Lawrence expeditions. Of these, he expects the humpback and minke to be the most likely to react to the skirl of the bagpipes by surfacing and perhaps standing up on their tails.

Recess accord down the pipe

OTTAWA (CP) — Government and opposition attempts to work out an agreement that would end the extended sitting of Parliament collapsed today.

The Progressive Conservatives blamed the New Democratic Party, which has forced the House to meet this week to draw attention to NDP objections to the government decision last Thursday on the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline. The NDP blamed the Tories.

The three party House leaders emerged from their third meeting of the day saying they have no idea when they will agree to recess for the summer.

NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles said he had proposed two days of debate, followed by a vote Wednesday night on whether construction of southern portions of the pipeline, the so-called pre-build section, should proceed.

Government House Leader Yvon Pinard, who had made such an offer Monday, agreed but Conservative House Leader Walter Baker did not, Knowles said.

Baker told reporters he had no objection to Pinard's original offer, which would have limited the debate to Tuesday.

Knowles said he had "the feeling that Mr. Baker is using this, that he doesn't want the House to end until after the Thursday meeting (between Prime Minister Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed on oil prices)."

Baker said Monday that if the Commons were still sitting Thursday and Friday, it will give the opposition a chance to grill Trudeau and Energy Minister Marc Lalonde on the subject.

Earlier Monday, the National Energy Board cleared away the final regulatory obstacles for construction this summer on the southern Canadian sections of the line by announcing that several issues concerning the ability of Foothills Pipe Lines (Yukon) Ltd. to obtain financing for that part of the project have been resolved.

Exxon profit reflects dip in demand

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's largestoil company, says it earned $1.03 billion in the second quarter of 1980, a 25½ per cent increase from the second quarter of 1979 but down sharply from its first-quarter gains this year.

The profit increase marked a slowdown from the company's 102 per cent increase in the first quarter.

Exxon chairman Clifton Garvin said today the company's second-quarter earnings reflect "declines in volume and margins" in U.S. petroleum refining and marketing operations, and a $368-million foreign-exchange loss as the U.S. dollar weakened on world currency markets.

U.S. gasoline demand in the first half of 1980 was seven per cent below 1979 levels as sharply rising prices sparked conservation moves. The upward spiral of world oil prices has cooled since then.

On Monday, Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), the sixth-largest U.S. oil company, said it earned $488.2 million in the second quarter, a 39.4-per-cent gain from the second quarter of 1979. First-quarter earnings were up 52 per cent.

Exxon said its second-quarter earnings figure compared with $830 million in last year's second quarter. Per-share earnings rose to $2.36 from $1.88, and sales rose to $26.2 billion from $18.6 billion.

The Chicago-based Indiana Standard's per-share earnings rose to $1.68 from $1.19. Sales rose to $7.3 billion from $4.6 billion.

The company earned $1.064 billion in the first half, up 52 per cent from $700.2 million in the comparable period of 1979. Per-share earnings rose to $3.63 from $2.39, and sales rose to $13.7 billion from $9 billion.

Lions jump into sea jousting

In Venice they do it on the lagoon in long-prowed gondolas, but the town of Sidney plans to use plain, square-ended herring skiffs for its version of the classic sport of sea jousting.

This maritime activity has an ancient and honorable history, and Sidney Lions Club hopes to make it as famous as Nanaimo's bathtub race.

Several Lions gave a demonstration on the weekend of this wet and wonderul sport.

Like King Arthur's knights of the Round Table, sea jousters are equipped with long padded poles. But instead of a steed, they stand at the end of long planks fastened to the bow of a slowly moving boat.

The object is to unhorse, er, dunk your opponent.

Phil Hendry is credited with the idea. He said he watched Venetian gondoliers bashing each other and thought the same sport suitably adapted to West Coast conditions could put Sidney on the map.

"Sidney's come up with a first," Hendry said Monday.

The Sunday affair at Tulista Park on the waterfront (next to the Anacortes ferry dock) will have something for everyone.

"It's a family-oriented day," he said.

There will be a salmon barbecue, hot dogs, pop and ice cream and a fishing derby for the kids with more trophies.

Doctors organize beach clean-up

By AL FORREST

The Victoria Medical Association is urging yacht clubs, commercial fishermen, sports fishermen and other boaters and swimmers to join in a campaign for clean water and beaches.

VMA president Paul Broome said today doctors have become alarmed about a possible health hazard as well as the esthetic questions of sewage in the sea.

"There is a risk of a hepatitis epidemic with so much sewage near the beaches. We are going to put a lot of our energy into this campaign."

Broome said the doctors are looking for support from municipal authorities and from Health Minister Rafe Mair.

In the legislature Monday, Mair said he would study Victoria's polluted beaches to see if there is a case for provincial action.

Broome said doctors realize sewage treatment plants are expensive but there may be no alternative because of the increasing dangers to health.

"We must stop treating the sea as a sewer. We invite tourists to beautiful Victoria and then we ask them to look at this. It's incredible."

The tales, he said, are woeful.

Reports of all types of foreign matter have been reported on and near the beaches.

"Children find these things floating in the water. It's disgraceful. It's not pretty and it is a danger to health."

He recited a long list of items reported by adults and children.

Broome said all yachtsmen and fishermen have an interest in the question, along with swimmers and those who like to stroll the beaches.

"We hope that everyone will become as concerned as we are."

Establishment of treatment plants seemed to be the only solution and funds would have to be found — or Victorians would pay a dearer price in a short time.

Broome said Dr. Romeo Sanglap has been appointed to the VMA environmental committee and will play a key role in gathering information for the campaign.

Sanglap said that longer outfalls are not the answer. Sooner or later the raw sewage returns to the beaches.

He said children can be contaminated by picking up stones on the beaches.

In the legislature Monday Victoria MLA Gordon Hanson asked Mair to show leadership on the pollution problem and call municipal leaders together to find a solution.

Under current cost-sharing formulas, the provincial government would pay 75 per cent of approved costs of sewage treatment facilities.

Wright fights levelling Truth Centre mansion

Dr. Emma Smiley said today the Victoria Truth Centre wants to demolish its century-old Fort Street building which has been placed on the city's heritage list and replace it with a modern church.

The minister ran into some opposition at city council's land use planning committee this morning when Ald. Bob Wright told her council would probably designate the old mansion if the Truth Centre went ahead with its plans without making any changes.

"There isn't one thing about it that's heritage," Smiley said about the building at 1201 Fort, the often-renovated former mansion of Sir Henry Pelling Perew Crease, an early member of the legislature and once attorney-general of B.C.

She said since the Truth Centre bought the house and its three acres of park-like grounds in 1948, there have been many changes and additions.

Rats were running around the building when the church moved in, she said. It was once a three-storey wooden building, now it is a two-storey stucco structure. Eight fancy marble fireplaces were removed by the church and other significant changes were made over the years.

Smiley said architect Darrel Jensen has prepared an angular modern design for a new church to replace the old building.

"We're going to keep all the trees and the park," Jensen said. The church will extend the present small prayer garden at the back of the building around to the front of the property with its broad lawn and garry oak.

Wright told the delegation there were problems with the Truth Centre's proposal. He told them to go to council's heritage advisory committee first and convince them of the need to demolish the existing structure.

He also said that in his opinion, the proposed design — Jensen brought a model of the one-storey building — did not fit in with the heritage nature of upper Fort Street with its restored 19th century houses.

"How about if we sell it to the city for $4 million and we go somewhere else?" Smiley asked with a smile.

"I'd love to do what you'd love us to do," she said, "I believe in cooperation."

But she said the perfect answer for the Truth Centre would be permission to demolish as of Sept. 1.

The committee made no decision on the matter, but decided to let the church's proposal wend its way through the ordinary planning procedure. Jensen said they would go before the heritage committee to explain the proposal.

Minnie writ contested

Saanich voted by a narrow margin Monday to contest a B.C. Supreme Court writ filed by the Cadboro Bay Residents Association alleging bias on the part of a former alderman in the Minnie Mountain controversy.

In a 4-3 vote led by Mayor Mel Couvelier, council agreed to defend the municipality in the court action — the second attempt by the neighborhood group to void a bylaw which permits a multiple dwelling project to go ahead.

Municipal solicitor Chris Nation said the petitioners want to overturn the bylaw on the grounds that the lawyers acting for the developer were also Saanich's lawyers, and then-alderman Dave Paterson worked for the same firm.

The residents association allegation of bias on the part of Paterson was not allowed in the association's first suit against Saanich, which the municipality and the developer won in the B.C. Court of Appeal.

"But in giving reasons for his judgment the judge more or less invited the group to bring an action on grounds of bias," said Nation.

Since the first court case, the original developers, Broadmead Farms, have sold the 70-acre property in the Ten Mile Point area to R & M Developments and some single family lots have gone on sale.

The proposed townhouse and condominium parts of the project have not yet been started.

Ukrainian youth search heritage across country

KOBYLECKYJ

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria's Ukrainians and their culture will be catalogued and recorded in a unique publication being prepared by several Ukrainian-Canadian students who visited the city Monday.

Oleh Kobyleckyj (that's Ol-ee Kob-a-less-key for those unfamiliar with perogies and cabbage rolls) and three companions arrived on the ferry in the morning, at the halfway point in a 12,000-kilometre cross-Canada trip.

They are documenting as much Ukrainian culture as they can for a non-profit guidebook to be published in the fall.

The Ukrainian-Canadian Students' Union organized the project and got an $11,500 grant from the federal multiculturalism secretariat in Ottawa, then Kobyleckyj's group headed west while a fifth student went east through Quebec and the maritimes.

They sent out notices and pre-printed forms in advance trying to get as much information as possible about Ukrainian cultural groups and social organizations. Now they're following up with in-person interviews and searching out Ukrainian roots.

"I've met writers, artists I didn't even know existed. It's really interesting," Kobyleckyj said in an interview Monday.

An example occurred in Calgary. Kobyleckyj said they found a plaque in an auditorium there to the memory of a famous Ukrainian musician who lived and died in Winnipeg.

Their journey of discovery — the four are driving a small car towing a tent trailer — includes searching out the sites of old villages on the Prairies founded by Ukrainian immigrants.

Houses and buildings are gone but a church and small cemetery remain at some of these bygone communities, Kobyleckyj said. Their book will include the locations of as many as they can find.

They hit the major centres of population along the Trans-Canada Highway and on the return trip starting this week they'll look for signs of Ukrainian culture in small towns and villages across the west. Ontario, bypassed on the way out west, will also be covered on the return.

Alberta with its many Ukrainian communities and organizations was a relatively easy job. Alberta's Ukrainians put together a provincial directory of their own and the students were able to copy much of the information for inclusion in the national source book.

It will be paperback size and Ukrainian businessmen have agreed to help subsidize printing costs, Kobyleckyj said, so it can be sold for around $3.

Divided into seven categories — performing arts and fine arts, academic resources, organizations, landmarks, buildings and monuments — and into the five geographic regions of the nation, the students hope the book will be a comprehensive guidebook to things Ukrainian in Canada. The organizers will distribute copies to libraries and newspapers across the country.

If you're of Ukrainian descent or have information that ought to be included, the students want to hear from you. Write to Ukrainian Canadian Cultural Resource Project, 3370 St. Zotique E., Montreal, H1X 1C8.

Cadillac Fairview wins N.Y. contract

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch has announced that a Canadian company has been awarded the development contract for the East River waterfront.

The contract went to Cadillac Fairview Corp. Ltd., based in Toronto, and its New York affiliate Related Housing Companies Inc.

River Walk, consisting of about 1,800 residential units, a small hotel and a 200-slip marina, will be built along the waterfront area running from 16th Steer to 24th Street.

Koch said the development will cost an estimated $274 million and the improved property will provide the city more than $10 million a year in rentals and real estate taxes.

Koch told a news conference "there will be changes and modifications in the plan" and that "the developers will be working with the city and we hope to have a letter of intent within the next month."

Opening lead — king of spades.

How often do you have to make six good plays in a row to make a contract? Surely not often, but here's a case where declarer performed that feat. West led the king of spades against four hearts, taken in dummy with the ace. South now made his first good play when he ruffed a spade with his seven of trumps.

South made his second good play when he led the jack of hearts, not the five, to dummy's king. This well-considered play paid off when it enabled declarer to stay in dummy after he led the six of hearts and played his five on dummy's six.

Then came South's third good play when he ruffed another spade — in pursuance of his plan to reduce his trump length to the greatest extent possible. The effect of South's first five plays was that his only remaining trumps were the A-10-9, while East still had the Q-4.

South would have preferred to be in dummy at this point, in order to ruff still another spade and thus immobilize East's Q-4 of trumps. But South was in his own hand and had to find a way to force West to give him another ruff.

He accomplished this by making his fourth good play when he cashed the A-K of clubs, thus denuding West of clubs and reducing West's hand to spades and diamonds. Now came declarer's fifth good play when he exited with the king of diamonds.

West took the king with the ace and cashed the queen of diamonds, but then had to lead a spade or a diamond. South ruffed the return, reducing his holding to the A-10 of hearts and three of clubs. East's cards were the Q-4 of hearts and jack of clubs. Declarer now exited with a club — good play number six — and East had to yield the last two tricks to South.

Before the judge

Ada May James, of 497 Island Highway, was charged in an April 28 stabbing incident involving her brother, Toby Williams, during a cribbage game.

A preliminary hearing into the charge began July 4 but Williams failed to appear as a crown witness in the case and a subpoena was issued for his arrest.

On Friday, Judge Fred Green remanded the case for three days while the crown pondered its position.

Law told Judge Harold Alder on Monday that Williams had still not been found and that even if he was found, would be a reluctant witness in the case.

An escaper from the Jordan River forestry camp was given an additional 13 months in jail after he pleaded guilty to two counts of auto theft and one count of being unlawfully at large.

Donald Jason Schneider, 20, was given concurrent, 12-month terms for the two counts of theft over $200 but both terms are in addition to the term he is now serving. He received another month for absenting himself from the Jordan River prison camp June 29.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said Schneider was sentenced June 25 to six months in jail for possession of stolen property and possession of housebreaking instruments and went missing four days later.

The first theft offence occurred June 4 when he was arrested at 2:10 a.m. at View and Blanshard. A 1969 Ford Bronco valued at $11,000 taken from McCallum Motors Ltd., 1101 Yates, had been stolen . Smith said Schneider had been to the car dealership earlier that day, wrote up a sales contract for the truck and even handed over a cheque to the salesman. Schneider had been given a key that day for a test drive. He told police the vehicle was in Sooke.

In the second theft, Schneider and a companion were arrested in the 1500-block Burnside West at 3:30 a.m., July 7, while towing a Ford Galaxy which had been reported stolen from an apartment parking lot. Schneider told Saanich police the vehicle belonged to a friend.

The transmission and motor had been taken out of the car but was found later at his companion's residence.

Defence lawyer Don Linge said before Schneider was classified to the Jordan River camp, he was given permission to attend a friend's funeral by Wilkinson Road officials.

Two days before the funeral, Schneider was transferred to Jordan River, where prison officials reversed the decision. Linge said Schneider decided to go to the funeral anyway.

Concerning the auto thefts, Linge said Schneider came from Ontario where his friends made a living by stealing cars.

Lorraine Sharon Lamond, formerly of 2813 Inlet, pleaded guilty last month to 10 counts of false pretences and one count each of fraud and impersonation and was remanded in custody until Monday for sentencing.

Cheques ranging in amounts from $203.40 to $13.14 were returned by banks because of insufficient funds and the fraud charge was in connection with a $206 cheque for a one-way airline ticket from Victoria to Thunder Bay. She was stopped at Vancouver International Airport, court was informed.

She had previous convictions in Thunder Bay in 1973 for theft and in 1976 for fraud, receiving suspended sentences and probation each time.

Pearce told the woman he had considered that a sentence of nine months would have been appropriate but decided on the lesser sentence because of the excellent presentation by her defence counsel, Suzanne Paterson.

Court was told Gregory Harold Jackson was in a vehicle June 17 which rear-ended another which was stopped to make a left turn. Smith said Jackson's vehicle hit the stopped car so hard it moved 50 feet. He also stated there were no skid marks indicating Jackson did not apply the brakes before impact. Three persons were injured and the front car sustained $2,000 damage.

Jackson was convicted of the same offence Oct. 12, 1979, in Duncan when he was fined $400.

* * *

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Terry Blaine MacKenzie, 20, of 991 Cloverdale, $500; Samuel Martin Prevost, 29, of 790 Dominion, $450; and Marvin Allan McGillivary, 25, of 238 Stormont, $300.

BASE COMMANDER Capt. Colin Shaw relinquishes command of CFB Esquimalt on Aug. 26 to become Chief of Staff Operations. His successor will be Capt. Thomas Murphy. A parade and change of command ceremony — open to the public — will take place on the Naden parade square that day.

God to intervene, Witnesses believe

A resolution calling for strict neutrality by Jehovah's Witnesses throughout the world was endorsed by some 4,000 sect members meeting in Memorial Arena Monday.

Richard Tannhauser of Victoria spoke about people who are destroying the environment.

"As to a state of repair, there is no denying the fact the earth is being ruined today and is in danger of being ruined to a horrifying extent."

Tannhauser, comparing God to a property owner, said it seems the time is already overdue for Him to get rid of those responsible for ruining His originally perfect property.

"By now the time when He should do this cleansing work ought to be near," he said.

Witnesses believe God will soon intervene in to bring peace and harmony to the world.

Tannhauser said the United Nations is powerless to prevent a holocaust, and the world group is "a vain hope for staving off the human race's annihilation by its own means."

Referring to the biblical warning God will "bring ruin to those ruining the earth," Tannhauser said, "His action will be controlled. It will not wipe out mankind completely. It will leave approved survivors."

Walter Graham of Toronto presented the neutrality resolution.

He presented an eight-point condemnation of the drift of mankind away from God's laws to the pursuit of material goods and selfish pleasure.

"We see individuals plagued with a host of physical, mental and emotional ailments and breakdowns despited widely-acclaimed medical achievements," he said.

"As the world sows, it now reaps — rotten fruitage. God's appointed time draws near for its abrupt and violent destruction."

Graham then appealed for neutrality in the affairs of Witnesses in more than 200 countries.

Ponytails vanish from gymnastics

At Munich eight years ago, 17-year-old Olga Korbut of the Soviet Union kindled competitive fires in the mothers of little girls throughout the world when she bounded blithely to the winner's platform to accept gold medal after gold medal.

At Montreal in 1976, Korbut was a glum member of the supporting cast and the plaudits descended on 14-year-old Nadia Comaneci as the white-clad Romanian sylph drew perfect scores from the awe-stricken judges for several of her graceful routines.

Comaneci is back this year, after missing the 1979 world championships because of an infected hand, and the judges in Moscow still thought well enough of her routines in Monday's compulsory exercises to give her a total of 39.85 points, including another 10 in her specialty, the balance beam.

Like Korbut before her, she was being challenged by an Olympic newcomer, Natalia Shaposhnikova, who matched Comaneci's 39.85 score and gained a 10 of her own in the vaulting event.

But Shaposhnikova is no infant prodigy. At 19, she is a year older than Comaneci, who has shed her childlike pigtails for a modishly adult short hairstyle.

The Soviet Union, which leads the men's team standings going into today's free exercises, also pulled ahead of Comaneci and her team-mates in the women's team event as the Romanian girls stood third behind the Russians and East Germany.

The Russians and East Germans picked up two gold medals apiece in Monday's final Olympic events, all of them in aquatic competition. That gave the Soviet Union six of the 12 golds awarded in the first two days to three for East Germany, all won by its unbeaten women's swimming team.

Three countries broke the Russian-East German monopoly as Cuban weightlifter Karoly Varga broke two world records on his way to the 56-kilogram class title, Hungarian marksman Karoly Varga equalled another in the smallbore rifle prone event and unheralded Bengt Baron of Sweden upset the favored Russians by swimming to victory in the men's 100-metre backstroke.

Baron, unranked among the world's top 25 backstrokers when he came to Moscow, swam the fastest 100 of his life to win the event in 56.53 seconds over Viktor Kuznetsov and Vladimir Dolgov of the Soviet Union, the favorites in the absence of the powerful United States swimming tem due to the Olympic boycott.

Kuznetsov was timed in 56.99 and Volkov in 57.63.

Another Soviet favorite justified his status as Sergei Kopliakov led team-mate Andrei Krylov to the finish line in the men's 200 freestyle in one minute 49.81 seconds, an Olympic record.

Barbara Krause improved on her own world record for the second time in as many days as she won the women's 100 freestyle in 54.79 and was joined by Caren Metschuck and Inez Diers in an East German medal sweep.

The world mark remained intact in the women's 200 butterfly but there was no lack of excitement as 17-year-old Ines Geissler touched in 2:10.44, a bare hundredth of a second ahed of Sybille Schoenrock. Michelle Ford of Australia beat out Andrea Pollack, the defending champion and former Olympic record-holder, to prevent another East German sweep.

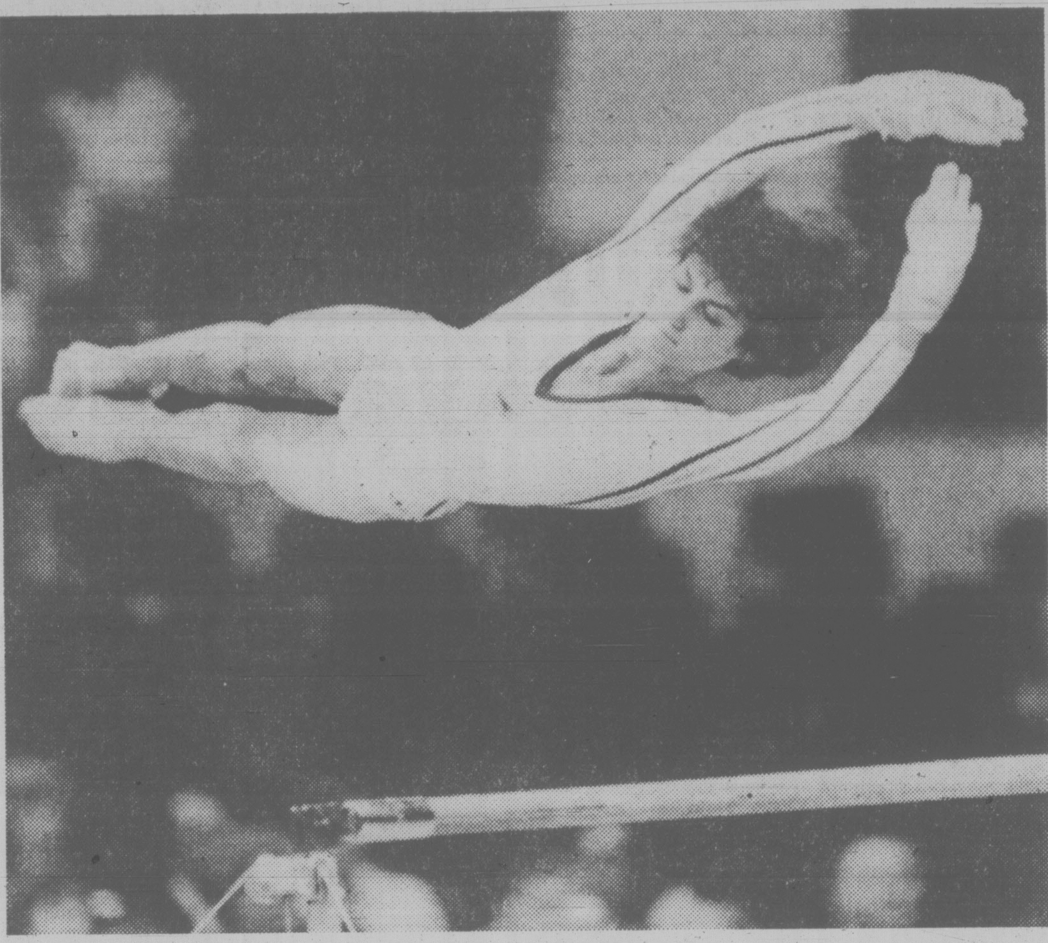
Irina Kalinina, the halfway leader, hung on to win the women's springboard diving title for the Soviet Union but her team-mate, Zhanna Tsirulenkova, dropped from second to fourth place behind East Germans Martina Proeber and Karin Guthke.

Newcomers to Olympic competition dominated the smallbore rifle event as Varga and East German Hellfried Heilfort both equalled the world and Olympic record of 599 points with the Hungarian taking the gold medal on a countback. Another Olympic freshman, Petar Zaprianov, shot 598 for the bronze.

Nunez, the 1979 Pan-American Games champion took the world record away from Yurik Sarkisian of the Soviet Union with a total lift of 275 kilos and also exceeded the world mark in the snatch by hoisting 125. Sarkisian, the silver medallist, improved on his own world mark by lifting 157.5 in the jerk.

In team sports, the Soviet men's basketball and water polo teams virtually assured themselves of promotion by winning their second straight preliminary matches and Spain emerged as the surprise leader in field hockey with a 2-0 record while favored India was held to a 2-2 tie by Poland.

Austria, with a victory and two second-place finishes, made the best showing on the opening day of yachting as disqualifications affected the results in the Finn and Flying Dutchman classes.



LIKE BIRD IN FLIGHT, Romania's Nadia Comaneci flips during performance on uneven bars in gymnastics competition Monday at Moscow Olympic Games. Nadia earned near-perfect mark of 9.95 in this event, but in exercise that followed — the balance beam — she scored perfect 10.

Track stewards have responsible role to play

So summer is here. At least it was on Sunday and Monday. And that was nice.

Before then there was a day when it wasn't that enjoyable. Life at the track, which can be simple — like picking winners — suddenly wasn't. It was confusing.

Owner-trainer-driver Joe Hudon got suspended at Sandown because one of his horses showed up with a positive test after a win. That was a shocker. Joe says he is innocent. He may be, but a trainer is responsible for his horse, regardless. Joe knows that as well.

The track stewards must be responsible too. When the test on Joe's horse showed positive, they had no alternative. They acted quickly and suspended Hudon temporarily, pending a hearing. Which is their duty.

But they did have an alternative when they refused to explain why Hudon had been taken off all his drives on Thursday of last week. You just don't dismiss a suspension, even temporary, of the meet's leading driver, that lightly.

What did they think: That all horse players are dumb? They are people. They can notice things. They ask questions. They are entitled to. Many of them knew. So why the downplay?

Hudon's not driving and one of the horses he trains is out, too. Why? That was basis of the question. Simple, and straightforward. Just to make it official and get the correct ruling so there would be no misunderstanding. And the racing fans would have the answer — officially. Which they should. Stewards at thoroughbred meetings have always been more than willing to oblige.

★ ★ ★

"Not allowed to," the man in the tower said in effect. Horse cabbage, it says here. Everybody on the backstretch knew of the incident. Even Joe was talking about it. "Why shouldn't I?" he said. "I'm innocent. I'll take a lie detector test if necessary." Joe didn't mind the questions and many of his friends were commiserating with him over his misfortune while the races were being run.

Oh yes, later the man upstairs admitted there was a problem but that was after he was told what the reporter knew. Even then, he wouldn't issue an official statement.

To compound matters, the man upstairs also said he didn't know when the hearing on Joe would be held. Joe got the word on the fine and suspension the next day. More horse feathers.

Now I ask: Wouldn't it have been much simpler for the man to have said: Yes, Hudon has been suspended temporarily for . . . whatever it was . . . giving the horse, the race, the date, the infraction, et al . . . and we will inform you of our final decision after the hearing?

Yes? No! Admit nothing. Actually Hudon's fine and suspension aren't official for Joe Public yet (or weren't when this was written). A reporter (not this one) was told if he wanted the details, to ask Joe. He did. Joe told him. But why all the malarkey? It doesn't make any sense. If it does, I'd like to know, because otherwise I happen to think that track stewards in B.C. are doing a fine job.

But not this time. And so, some day down the line Joe's case will be made official, I guess. Or Joe may be cleared in his appeal. Who knows? Until then the only way the fan will know is if Joe keeps driving, or doesn't. Won't we all? Horse feathers!

Speaking of harness racing — and many do find it interesting even if it is difficult to understand some of muddled official thinking — when wonder pacer Niatross lost a couple of races last week after winning 19 straight, the colt's owners got to feuding, according to a story in the New York Times.

Divided in their opinions were, on the one hand, Elsie Berger, the horse's breeder, and Clint Galbraith, the trainer and driver; and on the other a 25-member syndicate that purchased one-half interest in Niatross for $4 million.

They were at odds whether Niatross should race again for the obvious reasons. Galbraith said the horse was all right, despite tumbling over the inside rail in his first loss. And he and Berger wanted it to run. Galbraith was backed by two veterinarians, that Niatross had not suffered any injuries in the fall.

Then when Niatross barely qualified for the Meadowlands Pace in his second defeat, finishing fourth after breaking stride, the syndicate got worried all over again that their investment was in trouble. It was felt there was something wrong with the horse. Any more defeats and down would go their stock and stud fees.

Well, Niatross proved himself all over again by winning the Meadowland Pace, and in record time too. And, after seeing more than a few re-runs of that tumble over the rail, it just seems remarkable that a horse could come back from a spill like that — just one week later — and win against the best there is.

Tough? Standardbreds must be double tough and Niatross may be a wonder horse. I don't think either side has much to worry about.

And that's no horse feathers.

Puhl's single lifts Astros

By Associated Press

Terry Puhl felt no pressure despite the air-tight ninth inning situation, Frank LaCorte felt dizzy from a bout with the flu and after the Houston Astros pair finished Monday night's 3-2 National League baseball victory over New York, the Mets felt the blahs.

LaCorte, recovering from the flu, pitched two perfect innings and Puhl, the native of Melville, Sask., who came to bat with an 0-13 string in the ninth, clubbed home the winning run as the Astros beat the Mets and moved 1 1-2 games in front in the NL West Division.

"Pressure? I felt no pressure," Puhl said of his ninth-inning single through the middle that scored Jeff Leonard with the winning run. "It was a rather calm task.

"It's been a long time since I got a hit but I'm not going to go home and go crazy."

LaCorte, 6-0, retired six batters in the eighth and ninth innings in his first action since July 13.

"I've been home in bed with 102 degree fever," said the hot Astros reliever. "I've been dizzy from the medication but I felt good out there tonight."

Elsewhere Monday in the National League, Montreal Expos took Atlanta Braves 8-6, Cincinnati Reds edged Philadelphia Phillies 5-4, St. Louis Cardinals beat Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2 and, in a game suspended to today because of darkness and rain, San Francisco Giants and Chicago cubs were dealocked 0-0 after 12 innings.

In the American League, Baltimore Orioles slugged out a 12-5 win over Minnesota Twins in the nightcap of their doubleheader after losing the opening 8-7 in 11 innings; Kansas City Royals edged Chicago White Sox 2-1; Toronto Blue Jays blanked Oakland A's 1-0; Milwaukee Brewers downed New York Yankees 7-4, Detroit Tigers drubbed California Angels 14-3, Texas Rangers beat Boston Red Sox 5-3 and Seattle Mariners defeated Cleveland Indians, 7-0.

Gary Carter crashed a grand-slam home run in a six-run Montreal first inning and a two-run homer in the seventh while Atlanta unloaded five home runs.

"Now do you see why it's good to use the brushback pitch a little?" Expos manager Dick Williams said after the fireworks had ended. "There are no more now than there have been in the last 105 years.

"The beanball isn't the term. It's brushback pitch."

"It was probably one of the best nights I've had in the major leagues," Carter said. "But more than anything else, I'm pleased we won the game.

"I remember the last time we were in here, Larry Parrish hit three home runs and drove in seven runs, and the final score was Atlanta 8, Parrish 7."

Yacht meet hardest hit

TALLIN, Soviet Estonia (Reuter) — The Olympic regatta, Soviet Estonia's big chance for a share of the international limelight, is turning out to be a bitter-sweet luxury.

President Carter's boycott campaign against the 1980 Games has damaged the yachting competition more than almost any other Olympic event. Compared with the 40 sailing nations which competed in the 1976 Montreal Olympics, only 23 are represented in Tallin.

It is a disappointment for the Estonians, who spared neither money, time nor effort to show the world they could play Olympic hosts.

"Just imagine you had done everything to lay on a party for all your friends, and then they don't turn up," said a young woman guide at the $67 million rouble ($100 million) complex at Pirita, outside Tallinn. "How would you feel?"

Senior Olympic officials like the regatta press chief, Aado Slutsk, admit to similar feelings but say that the boycott should not be over-dramatised.

Tourism could have helped Estonia recoup some of the costs of holding the yachting competition. But after early predictions that up to 18,000 foreign visitors would come to Tallinn during the regatta, Soviet reports now say the city is ready to accommodate about 3,000 foreigners.

Just how many will show up is hard to establish, though an enquiry with the state travel agency Intourist produced a rather pessimistic-sounding estimate that there would be just 700 foreign tourists in Tallinn for the yachting.

Some Estonians questioned by western reporters disapproved of the way money was lavished on Olympic projects rather than on new hospitals or a new national library.

Estonia, whose population numbers about 1.5 million, was annexed by the Soviet Union in mid-1940 and apart from a three-year occupation by Nazi Germany during World War two the Estonians have been ruled from Moscow ever since.

They have clung to their cultural ties with neighboring Finland and Tallinn has even created a separate mascot for the yachting competition — a wide-eyed seal called Vigri who corresponds to Moscow's Misha the bear.

Turner swamped

The 12-metre yacht easily won a pair of races and a third contest was aborted after the skipper from San Diego forced Courageous off the starting line and took a long lead.

Turner now has a race record now of 6-13.

The third United States defender candidate, Russell Long's Clipper, has the worst record with a score card of 4-10. Long faced Conner today in the fourth day of observation trials, which run through July 30.

Two marathons in 20 days and 900 miles in between

By MAX LOW

Running two marathon races within three weeks, 20 days to be exact, isn't enough for Victoria's Al Howie. He has to have a little something in between — like a jog of 900 miles or so!

The slender, fair-haired long-distance man better known for his on-the-road fund-raising feats, will compete in the first annual Royal Victoria Marathon, which is sponsored by the Victoria Times, Radio CJVI90, the Osaga running shoe company, Molson's Brewery and The Bay, on Saturday, Sept. 20.

Around 200 City runners are training hard and attending clinics each Sunday morning and Royal Victoria Marathon Committee chairman Peter Wheaton expects a field of more than 1,000 runners from as far away as Japan and Hawaii will take part

Before Al Howie runs in the Victoria race, however, he plans to compete in the Chasquis Edmonton Marathon, being staged as part of Alberta's 75th anniversary celebrations, on August 31.

Those two 26-mile races would be quite enough for most people. But not for Howie. Straight after the Edmonton Marathon, he intends to run (over the Rockies and all!) from the Prairie city to Victoria, arriving a couple of days before the Royal Victoria Marathon.

And Howie wants as many people as possible to sponsor him for a penny-a-mile (or more or less as they so desire) and suggests they phone RadioVI90 to give their pledges. The money he raises will all go to the United Way appeal.

With both marathon races and the run between, Howie will cover a distance of about 1,000 miles and to do it in the time he has, he'll need to run between 65 and 70 miles a day.

That's nothing, he says, even though the road will be very steep at times and the weather hot. He's done more than that, often.

It's all quite a different life nowadays for the 34-year-old Scottish-born runner who admits he once did everything that was wrong and bad for him.

"I smoked two and-a-half packs of cigarettes a day and stayed out late whooping it up and suddenly I started to feel I was getting old early," Howie explains in an interview. "Since I've been running, I feel as though I'm getting younger all the time!"

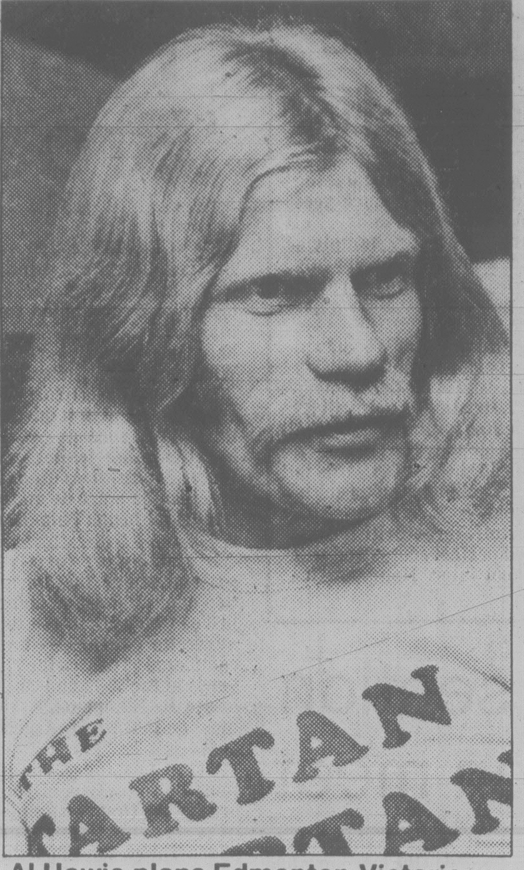
Previously Howie has steered clear of competition, preferring to stick to his money-raising runs for charity. However, he's hoping to perform well in both the Edmonton and Victoria marathons and to record a time of around two hours and 30 minutes in each of them.

He had a taste of competition in a 50-mile road race near Calgary recently and, though he had anxious moments, he came away delighted with his performance.

Determined to go out ahead of the field, Howie was well in front but at one stage officials directed him the wrong way over the mainly-logging road course. He ended up running three miles more than anyone else (before he got back on the right trail again) but he still won quite handily.

And despite the fact he'll run the Edmonton Marathon first and all those miles between, Al Howie admits he really wants to save his best effort for the Royal Victoria Marathon.

"Well, you see, he explains with a smile, "I kind of feel as though I'm an ambassador for the marathon . . . running to Victoria to compete in it."



Al Howie plans Edmonton-Victoria run

Green and Guenter back with Budgets

Victoria Budgets will have two players from the world champion runners-up back in the lineup for a pair of Super Series softball doubleheaders tonight and Wednesday at Royal Athletic Park.

Pitcher Rob Guenter and third baseman John Green have returned from the Canadian team, which finished second in the world tournament, losing 3-0 to the United States in the final last week in Tacoma.

Budgets, 34-10 for the season and 15-5 in the Super Series, face Southern Truck Raiders of Phoenix in the twin bills which begin at 7 each night.

Victoria-coach Harvey Stevenson said Dave Wilson (8-6) and Mark Smith (16-4) will be the starting pitchers tonight while Guenter (9-0) will start one of Wednesday's games.

Stevenson also reported the team as healthy and said Bob Burrows should be starting to get back into his old hitting form any day.

Joan Lawson fired a six-over-par 80 Monday to take the first-round lead in the 54-hole B.C. senior women's golf championship at Victoria Golf Club.

In second spot was her Uplands clubmate, Maureen Hibberson, who shot an 84.

Third was Anna-May Taylor of Vancouver Seymour with an 85 while Joyce O'Connor of Nanaimo and Jean Stewart of Vancouver Quilchena shared fourth with 86s.

In last year's tournament, Colleen McCulloch of Vancouver Pt. Grey, grouped with three others at 87 after Monday's first round, was the winner and Lawson was runner-up. And Lawson went on to place fourth in the Canadian senior championship at Edmonton.

Lawson toured the front nine in two-over-par 37 Monday but made some poor shots on the back nine and took double bogeys on the the 10th and 11th holes.

Athletics blank Remco on Fletcher's one-hitter

Bob Fletcher hurled a one-hitter Monday to spark Victoria Athletics to a 2-0 shutout over Remco Office Systems in a Heywood Men's Softball League game at Heywood Avenue Park.

Fletcher struck out five, walked three, hit two batters and lost his no-hitter in the fourth inning when Ken Geary led off with a single.

Ken Wilke doubled and singled and drove in what proved to be the winning run while Duane Bertrand also had two hits and drove in the other run.

In Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's League action at Hyacinth Park, New York-New York closed to within a point of second-place by smashing cellar-dwelling Vidalin Construction 15-2 while Strathcona Stingers and Victoria Athletics battled to a 2-2 deadlock.

Heather Knight came up with three hits and drove in three runs for New York-New York while Sherry Dixon had two hits and powered in four runs.

Nancy McLaughlin allowed seven hits to pick up the win before being relieved by Sandy Milliken, who struck out three, walked none and allowed no hits in three innings of relief.

Bev Karpiuk pitched a five-hitter for Stingers while Donna Triplett, Donna Urlacher and Shelley Wilson had two hits each. Triplett drove in both runs.

Linda Newcombe of Athletics pitched herself out of trouble several times and was backed by some solid defensive efforts while allowing nine hits.

Rebels topped Mega Power 7-6 and James Bay Inn downed Labatts 7-5 in Macdonald Men's League games at Macdonald Park.

Allman's Joy tripped Sooke 12-6 in a Lower Island Association intermediate "B" women's league game at Sooke.

Cosmos two wins away from Babe Ruth crown

SQUAMISH — There's a tough road ahead but Gordon Head Cosmopolitans still have a chance of winning the B.C. Babe Ruth 13-year-olds baseball championship.

Gordon Head crushed Prince George 14-5 Monday and plays Vancouver Inter-Community in the first leg of the final today. Gordon Head would need to win twice to take the title in the double-knockout tourney while the Vancouver squad needs only one win to wrap it up.

Gordon Head was beaten by Inter-Community Saturday but kept its hopes alive with two wins Sunday, 15-4 over North Vancouver and 13-6 over Trail.

Triangle rolls on

Steve Bedows pitched a two-hitter Monday to lead Triangle to a 10-1 win over Esquimalt as the Greater Victoria Little League baseball playoffs opened at Hampton Park.

Bedows struck out five batters and walked two while Don Woodley had two hits and a walk and scored three times for Triangle.

Teammate Stew Coulter also had two hits and Chris Barteaux and Derek Hamilton hit two-run singles.

Card cancelled

WINNIPEG (CP) — Assiniboia Downs has cancelled its regular Wednesday night thoroughbred racing card because of a dispute between jockeys and horse owners.

Langford girls win B.C. softball title

Langford edged Kelowna 4-3 in the final Sunday to win the B.C. juvenile (18 to 19-year-olds) girls' softball championship at Triangle Park.

The Langford girls made it to the final by beating Port Alberni 3-0 and Richmond, also 3-0, and Kelowna, after being nipped 2-1 by Richmond, crushed Port Alberni 11-3 and got past Richmond 1-0 to reach the final.

In the women's tournament in North Vancouver, Burnaby Klippettes edged defending champion Richmond 6-5 to take the title with North Vancouver third and Victoria Dolphins fourth.

Speedweek field should test Odie

Odie Robertson will still have plenty of competition tonight and Thursday while competing in stops two and three of the Speedweek Northwest open superstock series at Western Speedway.

The veteran driver from Denver won the main event in the opening race of the four-event series Sunday night on the dirt track at Skagit Speedway.

But Mike Miller of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., won't be able to make the races as expected.

However, Robertson will still face numerous top-notch drivers.

Time trials each day are scheduled for 7 p.m.

Quebec sniper takes long Bisley shootoff

BISLEY, England (CP) — Alain Marion, a police officer from Luceville, Que., who has been prominent in most of the competitions so far at the Bisley rifle meet, won the Donegall Challenge Cup on Monday in a sudden-death finish with Australian Ron Matthews.

They had tied during the weekend in a first tiebreaker after 10 competitors had made highest possible score — 50 — in the original match. They finished equal again Monday with four of their five shots in the bullseye and one in the inner ring. Then on the sudden-death finish each scored a bull.

Marion is tied for third with three British competitors after the first four matches of the Grand Aggregate, the over-all performance test which goes on throughout the week.

Last year's over-all champion, Arthur Clarke, a former British army officer is in the lead with five points dropped of a possible 200. Marion has dropped seven.

Major Dick Hampton of Woodlawn, Ont., who has been shooting at Bisley since 1946 and who won the Queen's Prize in 1966, is shooting as a privately-entered competitor for the first time in 35 years and Monday he scored a perfect 50 with 10 shots at 600 yards in the Alexandra Challenge Cup event to tie with 15 others.

In the shootoff, three British competitors posted perfect scores and will have to re-shoot later. Hampton finished 14th.

Have faith, B.C. Lion fans! 'Brockbuster' goes tonight

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions have developed a Brockbuster of a game plan for tonight's Canadian Football League game against Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

The Lions' pass rush — questionable at best during the last few seasons — will be attempting to harrass Dieter Brock who is off to a spectacular start at quarterback although Winnipeg is 0-2.

Brock, a star for five seasons under the Christian name Ralph and doing just as well as Dieter — the name he prefers — has completed 53 passes for 770 yards in the 36-13 and 20-17 losses to Edmonton Eskimos and Toronto Argonauts.

"That passing yardage must be some type of record for the first two games of a season," moaned Vince Tobin, the Lions defensive co-ordinator.

"They've moved the ball all over the field, but have had trouble pushing it across the goal line. We've got to get some pressure on Brock."

Bomber coach Ray Jauch must think the same way as Tobin because he spent weekend workouts concentrating on getting the ball over the goal line.

"Most teams do this when they're having trouble getting the ball down to score," said Jauch. "We used game situations down there because it's a different game when you're in close."

Defensive back Joe Fourqurean, an eight-year veteran with the Lions, probably knows Brock as well as anybody because they faced each other in their U.S. college days.

"Man, you know that guy is going to get his yards passing," Fourqurean said. "What we have to try to do is prevent him from getting the big play.

"What we hope to do is to mix up our coverages and keep him guessing."

The Lions already are mixing up their personnel in the defensive backfield and line as they hope to run their record to 2-0 after a 39-24 home opener win over Saskatchewan Roughriders two weeks ago.

Former Calgary Stampeder Ollie Bakken will take over at middle linebacker for the injured Sam Britts and the Lions had to suddenly add Marty Imhof, who last played defensive tackle for Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League in 1978.

After sitting out last year, Imhof found the urge to play again and attended the Lions' free agent camp in California. However, he was on Montreal Alouettes' negotiation list and signed with the Als.

He joined the Lions for his first workout Sunday after being cut by Montreal during the exhibition season. Imhof became a necessary acquisition when Saskatchewan claimed Mike Blanton who was placed on waivers to make room on the roster for Leo Sloan.

In another game tonight, Hamilton Tiger Cats (1-0) meet Montreal Alouettes (0-2) in Montreal.

Willard defeated Stephen Leire 6-7, 6-1, 6-0 in the singles final and combined with Mike Young of Vancouver to win the doubles crown.

A more-than-47-metre throw in the javelin helped Bogdanski finish with 3,968 points and a slight margin over Rick Jaskin of Alberni (3,915) in the 15-year-old boys' division.

Linda Martin of Victoria Flying Y, who performed so well the previous weekend at the Track City International Classic meet in Eugene, Ore., was edged for first place in the 14-year-old girls' pentathlon by Angela Hutchison of Burnaby Striders who piled up 2,925 points. Linda had 2,871.

At Eugene, Linda was second in the long jump and in the 100 metres, setting a B.C. record of 12.00 seconds for the sprint.

At the same meet, Ken Wilmshurst of Victoria Mercuries smashed both the meet mark and the B.C. record for 14-year-olds when he raced to victory in the 1,500 metres in four minutes, 8.9 seconds.

Wilmshurst, also second in the 800 metres, was named as the outstanding boy athlete in the 13 and 14-year age group.

There were several close battles for medals at the pentathlon meet in Surrey.

In the 12-year-old boys' division, Wade Mills of Powell River set the pace with 2,668 points, 26 ahead of Wade Anderson of VTC.

Hersha Griffith of the Flying Y placed second in the 10-year-old girls' class and Laurie Sawyer of VTC also took a silver in the 15-year-old girls' group, won by Jennifer Sharp of Duncan CeeVacs Club.

Also during the weekend, several Victoria athletes did well in the B.C. junior age championships and provincial team trials in Richmond.

Darren Ash, a junior with the VTC, won the 400-metre hurdles in a personal best time of 55.00 seconds and was selected to the B.C. senior track team that will compete at Edmonton next week and to the B.C. junior team which will compete at) Edmonton, Aug. 9 and 10.

Also named to the senior team were Tim Page of VTC, winner of for his first-place finish in the 100 metres in 11.00 secand a second in the 200.

Harold Willers and Brent Fougner, both of VTC, were selected to the senior team with wins in the hammer throw and triple jump, respectively, along with clubmate Allan Sheridan, second in the 110-metre hurdles.

Other Victorians chosen for the provincial junior team were Pat Wellmann of the Flying Y (second in both the 800 and 1,500), Dave Campbell of the Mercuries (fourth in the senior 1,500), and Terry Bateman of the Mercuries (second in the junior 5,000 metres).

Robert A.D. Ford, Canada's ambassador in Moscow for 17 years, retires this fall to the south of France — to write poetry. This may seem an odd undertaking for a man used to the strictures of international diplomacy but Ford is no stranger to the field. He has producedthree volumes of poetry, A Window on the North, written a quarter century ago, won the 1956 Governor-General's Award for Poetry. The Solitary City, written in 1969, five years after going to Moscow, "provided an illuminating, if sombre, glimpse into the reality of things," according to Toronto critic and Marcus Van Steen who said of Ford's third work, Holes in Space, "This is his best."

Ford

If you're not the Ronald Reagan who's running for president, it's no fun at all to be Ronald Reagan. Monroeville, Pa., psychotherapist Ronald Reagan knows. He's not even going to vote for the elder Reagan — says the only thing they have in common is, "we both claim we don't dye our hair." But it's professionally that the Pennsylvania Reagan suffers most. He says it's as if a person with an emotional problem came seeking a therapist, then walked into the office "and sees on the therapist's diploma that his name is Adolf Hitler. There's a certain revulsion to that."

Medical writer Timothy Crowell in the August issue of Forum magazine, claiming an estimated 2 million unnecessary operations are performed annually, at a cost of $4 billion and a loss of 10,000 lives: "There are those today — and doctors are among them — who are increasingly skeptical about the actual benefits of all the developments in 20th century medicine. They point to one surprising fact — that the great revolution in the history of medicine was the discovery that bacteria cause disease."

Brian Renaud of Toronto has discovered a new Canadian $2-bill that has no serial number on the front and only a faint mirror-image number on the back. Dealers and collectors, asked to estimate the value of Renaud's bill, said it might be worth as much as $100. There might be another 39 somewhere if the original sheet of 40 slipped past the Bank of Canada which controls the printing of Canadian paper money. Herbert Bishop, a Toronto expert on paper money errors, said this is likely the first error of its kind in Canada.

Dear Abby:

Concerning your advice to the Richmond man who asked what could be done about barking dogs: calling the police won't work. A barking dog was driving me crazy, night and day, so I called the police. An officer came to my house and told me there was nothing I could do about it. He then suggested I simply trap or shoot it!

Personally, I don't think it's very sporting to hunt domesticated animals — besides, it's against the law discharging firearms inside the city here.

Perplexed

Dear Abby:

If you want peace and quiet, away from the noise of barking dogs, don't move to Bel Air, Calif.!

They will investigate your complaint by coming out to see if the dog is being neglected or abused in any way. And if it is, they will help the dog and fine the owner!

No Dog Lover

Dear Abby:

We've been forced to move twice because of barking dogs — once in San Francisco and once in Hayward. I've called the police, the Humane Society, Animal Control and the SPCA, and learned that dogs have more rights than people.

Dog Hater

Dear Abby:

You are naive when it comes to trying to get relief from barking dogs by calling your police department. We had that problem. I called the police and they refused to come out.

I called my lawyer and even my county prosecutor. I was informed by both that there is no law about barking dogs. If a person disturbs the peace or creates a nuisance, the police will come out.

Hell

Dear Abby:

I seem to recall that a few years ago, Johnny Carson was going crazy because one of his neighbors had a couple of dogs who took to barking late at night and early in the morning. I think Johnny said he asked his neighbors in a nice way to please keep their dogs quite, but the dogs kept on barking, so Johnny took his neighbor to court. If I'm not mistaken I think Carson lost the case.

So, if Johnny Carson with all his clout can't get anywhere, that poor guy down in Richmond doesn't have a prayer.

Insomniac

Dear Insomniac:

The case never went to trial. A ruling was handed down that either the owners of the barking dogs had to keep them indoors at night and during the early morning hours when the prolonged barking took place, or hire a trainer to keep the dogs under control.

Since nothing further has been heard from Carson, I assume that nothing further was heard from the dogs.

Gloria Piercy hopes to resettle forever in the New Hebrides — depending on political stability in the Melanesian islands

Teacher's sights set on sun

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Gloria Piercy's friends can't understand her burning desire to return to the New Hebrides, a South Pacific paradise recently beset by violence on the eve of its independence.

The Victoria teacher's love affair with the Melanesian islands had its beginnings in a casual conversation in 1973. Piercy was undergoing a divorce and she happened to mention her desire to do some travelling to her lawyer, Vic Stephens.

Stephens asked if she intended visiting the South Pacific and the New Hebrides. Piercy said she was interested, though in fact she'd made no definite plans.

"Isn't that strange?" Stephens mused. " We're moving to the New Hebrides and the teaching facilities aren't too great."

Stephens suggested he'd be looking for someone to teach his children until they got into the swing of handling their schooling by correspondence.

Piercy agreed to help out — and then dashed home to find out where the New Hebrides were.

She found them west of Fiji and east of Australia, north of New Caledonia.

There are five active volcanoes on the New Hebrides, and there is constant seismic activity.

The population is close to 100,000 and there are more than 100 indigenous languages, plus English and French. A handy language to know is pidgin English, or Bislama.

And the islands are ruled by the last condominium government in the world, a British-French partnership that will fade into history in less than two weeks.

Piercy didn't head straight for the New Hebrides. She first flew to Hawaii and then boarded the Oriental Empress for a cruise to Japan, Taiwan, Singapore, Thailand and Bali.

Then it was on to Australia and New Zealand.

On Jan. 1, 1974, still a little shaky from a memorable New Year's Eve party in Tonga (where she got to shake hands with the Tongan king), Piercy arrived in the New Hebrides.

It was love at first sight though it took her a month to get used to the heat. The water temperature was 90 degrees F.

When she began tutoring the Stephens children, lessons started in her apartment at 7 a.m. By 11 it was too hot to work.

After three months the children were in the swing of correspondence courses and Piercy wasn't needed.

"But by this time I didn't want to leave. I didn't have a work permit but I managed to get another (visitor's) extension and I got a job as a secretary. I could barely type."

"I'd pay the natives who'd put an X or a thumbprint on the card."

The Stephens family then moved back to Victoria (Stephens later became the leader of the Progressive Conservatives in B.C.) but Piercy had her own friends by now and she decided to stay as long as she could.

When the company for which she worked went bankrupt, Piercy went to work for the receiver.

She returned to New Zealand but within a short time she was back working for the New Hebridean government compiling statistics.

Government workers take a whole week off for a wedding — two days to prepare, one day for the wedding and two days to get over it.

"They can get away with it so they do it," Piercy said.

When Piercy describes the competition of the British and French officials in the pre-independence condominium government, she sounds like a bemused Gulliver.

"The French and the British were always competing," she said. But the British held the clear upper hand when Queen Elizabeth II visited.

One of the highlights of the Queen's visit was provided by the men of Bunlap on the island of Pentecote. In May and June, after the yam harvest, the men build a 20- to 25-foot-high tower of vines and wood around a tall tree.

New Hebridean natives wear next to nothing so when the Queen visitied, Piercy said, some missionary ladies had seen to it that the performers were clothed in jockey shorts — dyed black.

Piercy said a man was injured in the jumps (a rare occasion), and there was much speculation that the underwear had thrown off the victim's timing.

But because of an oversight, whenever the elegantly-gowned ladies wanted to visit the powder room they had to tiptoe right past the men's urinals.

Piercy is back in Canada but only temporarily.

She owns a bit of land in the New Hebrides and she'd like to settle there, permanently.

But violence has cracked the facade of Eden, and she doesn't know if she'll be allowed to move in.

A native plantation owner named Jimmy Stevens has already taken over Espiritu Santo, the largest and richest of the islands, in a bid to make it a separate nation.

That move was followed by a rebellion of "cargo cultists" on the island of Tanna, and although French and British police moved in to quell the disturbance, one government official was killed.

It was on Tanna that the Melanesian named John Frum was supposed to have appeared. He told the natives the Americans would come in planes to give them all the material goods they wanted, as well as immortality.

The cult has spread all over the Pacific and into Asia and Africa as well.

It's expected that, among other things, independence will bring taxation.

"But if they're smart," Piercy said, "they'll maintain their tax-free status."

In this way, tourists and businesses will continue to come to the islands.

"A lot of Australians come to the islands and tourism would give themthe income they need."

But with several factions bidding to take over the islands, Piercy isn't optimistic about the future of her island paradise.

"If they're on their own, within six months they won't be producing anything," she predicted.

Maybe John Frum will return to sort things out.

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

When I first began my treatment for high blood pressure, it was 160 over 110. Now it's getting lower and lower. At what point can I believe that my high blood pressure is cured?

V.M.

Dear V.M.:

Control, rather than cure, of high blood pressure is the objective of treatment. For it must be assumed that if treatment is discontinued and the fundamental reason for the hypertension still exists, the blood pressure will go up again.

Far too many people are captivated by the "numbers" of the blood pressure readings. Many of them misuse the numbers and often arbitrarily stop taking their medication when they themselves decide "it's enough." This lack of compliance with the doctor's orders is one of the great threats to the permanent control of high blood pressure.

When you say, "160 over 110" the higher numbers refers to the systolic blood pressure; the lower, to the diastolic. What is the difference? The systolic pressure indicates the pressure within blood vessels at the exact fraction of a second that the heart beats. The diastolic pressure represents the pressure within the arteries in between the beats of the heart.

It is agreed that the diastolic pressure is more important than the systolic pressure as an index of the control of hypertension.

A recent report by the Joint National Committee on Detection, Evaluation and Treatment of High Blood Pressure indicates that the goal of a diastolic pressure below 90 is recommended. This objective can usually be achieved with drugs, dietary regimes and management of excess weight.

Tobacco should, of course, be eliminated. Patients with diabetes must be kept in complete control. Those with elevated cholesterol must be actively treated to reduce it. The limitation of salt, in addition to all the other forms of treatment, can reduce the diastolic pressure to below 90 and offer the patient the greatest chance to avoid the complications of hypertension.

I want to emphasize again that the greatest problem with hypertensive patients is the fact that they tend to refuse to acknowledge the need for adhering to the regime prescribed by their doctors. The advances in the treatment and control of mild and severe hypertension are spectacular.

Speaking of your health . . . last year's medicines were fine for last year's infections, but when they pass their expiration date they are useless and sometimes, hazardous.

youth clinic

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I've recently started to become interested in guys, well, I guess you could say that I've always been interested, although not this seriously.

I go to a well-respected Catholic school and I'm pretty popular with guys. The problem is my parents. They say I can't date until I'm out of university. God, I'll die by then.

They don't seem to think I'm old enough to have fun. I'm 16 years old for pete's sake!! All of my friends have or have had boyfriends except me and I feel terribly left out and alone. When a guy asks me out, I have to resort to saying "Sorry, I have to babysit."

I can't be babysitting all my life so I'll have to stop lying. But, if I tell them the truth they'll think I'm a little baby or something. By the time I'm out of university, I'll probably become so uninterested in guys, I'll become a nun!

When I go out with my friends, I have to be in at nine o'clock. It's getting so humiliating, I don't bother going out at all. Tell me, am I doing something to deserve this sort of "punishment"? Don't bother saying my folks are old-fashioned because they're not. I'm seriously thinking of leaving home so I can go out with guys. Please help me!!

Answer: I believe it is unrealistic for your parents to tell you that you can't date until you have finished university.

Parents are sometimes reluctant to admit that their children are growing up and can assume responsibility. Your parents' attitude does seem to indicate that they are reluctant to let go, and I hope that there may be a way that they can change this attitude because at 16 it is not too early for you to begin to date. The type of date and the lateness of the hour should still be for parents' approval, but it is natural for you to want to have dates. If there is nothing that you can do to change your parents' feelings that only university graduates should date, I can only suggest that you discuss your problem with a counsellor at school or a family service agency.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am a 19-year-old boy. Last week, my former girlfriend announced that she was carrying my baby. The problem is that I know she also went "all the way" with other guys when we were going together. Actually, this is the reason I broke up with her. What I want to know is do I owe her anything and do I have an obligation to the child?

Answer: You should take legal advice at once to find out whether it can be clearly established that you are the father. If you are the father, then you owe her moral support and the law will establish your financial responsibility for the baby. If you are clearly not the father, then you still have some moral responsibility to make sure she is cared for.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I hope you can help me solve a very embarrassing problem. I am 14 years old. Do I need a circumcision? Can a doctor do this in his office? Do my parents need to know?

Answer: Circumcision was originally a religious rite and was performed by a priest or rabbi. Only recently has it become a surgical operation performed in a hospital.

There is no need to have a circumcision unless the foreskin is so tight it cannot be pulled back. This is something you should discuss with your doctor. A circumcision is not an operation to be performed in the doctor's office. It would be done in the hospital.

Discuss your worry and embarrassment with your father. Tell him how you feel and ask what to do.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I used to think that I was the problem. But when I am by myself I'm fine. I'm constantly getting in trouble for getting my brother excited. I have often thought of committing suicide to get away from my parents. But then I thought why should I give up everything I'm working for, to give my parents the pleasure of being rid of me. I'm 16 years of age, and would like to move out but I can't afford it. My parents are constantly telling me what a disgrace I am and call me awful names. I would like to get into a home but don't know where any are in my city. Could you help me out?

Answer: The problem with letters such as yours is that I am often left with more questions than answers after reading them. I just wish I had a letter from your parents, telling us about their perceptions and grievances. Sometimes it is hard to believe that people are from the same family, their discrepancies in their stories being that radically different.

Certainly you are very unhappy at home. You feel that you are unfairly blamed, criticized and insulted. And I agree, nobody should have to live in those circumstances, if there are choices available. Choices do, in fact, exist. Through the Toronto Board of Education, various ministries and the Children's Aid Society, there are various kinds of living arrangements that can be made for teenagers who cannot get along at home. Your school guidance counsellor can get the ball rolling, if necessary.

How about trying to accomplish a reconciliation with your mother and father? Speak to them without anger, and tell them how sad you are. Ask whether they would go with you to see a family counsellor or therapist.

If they adamantly refuse, or continue to see you as the only problem, the "villain in the piece," so to speak, then you should speak to your guidance counsellor or a youth counsellor at a drop-in centre or youth clinic.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6323.

Crafts open-ended

By DEBORAH CHURCH
Christian Science Monitor

One of the challenges most professional teachers escape, but their parent counterparts face head-on, is dealing with a mind-stretching range of children that spans from unskilled, inarticulate and eager tots to competent, awkward, peer-pressured teen-agers. In summer, the full cornucopia of ages is liable to tumble into your home, looking for something to do.

The following crafts are open-ended enough to meet the needs of nearly any age group (parents included), with the potential necessary for a teen's intricate artistry and enough sheer gloppiness to appeal to a 2-year-old. On a pretty summer day, you can truck the children and materials outside for a carefree cleanup, but lay in a supply of floor-coating newspapers for rainy days.

1. Glop. This is gooey, drippy, slimy, repulsive, fascinating material that stretches see-through thin, pats pudgy thick, and can be cut with scissors.

Start with about ¼-cup white glue (a little goes a long way), and slowly add liquid starch until it congeals and pulls away easily from the container. The amount of starch necessary for coagulation seems to vary with the weather, but you probably will need at least ¼-cup of starch. If you like, add a few drops of food coloring for a splashy effect.

Note: The glue dough is toxic — not to be used with children who cannot keep it out of their mouths — and will not last much longer than a day.

2. Cornstarch dough. This is a fine sculpting dough, drying to a hard surface. It also vacuums up easily if the pieces pulverize.

Mix 1 cup cornstarch and 2 cups baking soda together in a saucepan until blended. Add 1¼-cups cold water and, if you like, a few drops of food coloring. Stir until smooth. Cook until boiling over medium heat, stirring constantly. Boil a minute or so until the mixture looks like mashed potatoes and pulls away easily from the pan. Turn out on the counter and cool for several minutes; then knead until smooth.

This dough may be used to make beautiful jewelry:

— Beads. Roll dough into balls, varying the size. Pierce each ball with a toothpick, working it around to make a good hole. Let bread dry in a warm oven for 5 to 6 hours or overnight. Gently remove the toothpick and paint the bread if you want. String with a tapestry or crewel needle and a double strand of extra-strong button or carpet thread.

— Bracelet/armband. A child who can roll out a thin "snake" can make this. Pinch the ends of the "snake" together, or overlap. Let dry 5 to 6 hours in a warm oven, or overnight. Paint.

— Pin. Make a ball and mash it into a circle. Decorate with other bits of dough, pressing them gently to make sure they adhere to the surface. Attach a safety pin to the back of the circle with a dab of dough. Let dry, then paint.

— Flower stand. If the child is too young to manage a "snake," try this craft. Make an interesting lump and coat it with an egg wash (one beaten egg with 1 tablespoon water). Poke a few holes in the lump with a toothpick and let it dry overnight in a warm oven. When the lump is dry, stick a few straw flowers in the holes. This makes an attractive gift, providing a happy outlet for the child's natural generosity.

3. Fence weaving. Using old scraps of cloth, rags, twine, string, yarn and construction paper, you can weave a chain-link fence into something that is, well, unique. Your teen will want something that looks organized, while your 18-month-old will just want to poke something through the fence. Provide plenty of material, and either direct each child to his or her own area of fence, or make it a group project.

4. Emergency paint. If rainy days catch you with a watercolor set bogged in murky browns, try this last-gasp mix: 3 heaping tablespoons powdered milk, 1 tablespoon flour, 8 to 10 drops of food coloring, and 5 to 6 tablespoons water. The powdered milk gives the paint a glistening effect, particularly pretty on construction paper. It also makes the paper fragile, so store it in the refrigerator--or throw out.

If you're out of powdered milk, you can make the paint anyway. Increase the flour to 3 tablespoons and decrease the food coloring to 5 or 6 drops. This is not the stuff that made Rembrandt great, but it will get you through the afternoon.

5. Bathtub finger paints. This is for those "well, why not?" days. Fill your tub with barefoot kids of varying heights and squirt the tiles around the bath with shaving cream. The children can use this like finger paint to make faces, designs, and intriguing blobs on the tile. After the giggles subside, hose down kids and tiles. Both should be cleaner.

6. Two-way cookies. A yummy afternoon project kids can do themselves. Melt one stick margarine or butter (your job) and mix it with 3 cups oatmeal. Add 2-3 cup honey, 3 tablespoons cocoa (the unsweetened kind), 3-4 cup powdered milk, ½-teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons vanilla, ½-cup peanut butter, ½-cup raisins, and mix thoroughly. Form into balls.

Now, if you can extricate this from the kids, either bake the balls on a greased cookie sheet at 350 degrees F for 10 to 12 minutes, or chill them in the refrigerator for an hour or so. The dough also may be eaten as is--a fact your children quickly will discover — but tastes a little better after chilling or cooking.

This is a very sweet cookie. You may want to reduce the honey to about ½-cup.

Women up in air over fires

By LESLIE SHEPHERD

VANCOUVER (CP) — A group of women will be flying over British Columbia this summer looking for the province's hot spots.

They are members of the B.C. chapter of the Flying 99s, an international organization of about 5,000 women pilots, and they will be participating in a new Firewatch program designed to supplement the provincial government's fire-control service.

Private and commercial pilots always have been asked to report suspicious fires but this is the first time a group has been given forest grid maps and trained to report and describe precise fire locations.

"It's completely voluntary," says pilot Connie May. "When we go on a trip or flight we get a forest map for the area we're going over and watch for any fires."

When a pilot spots a fire, she radios the location and description to a ground station which advises the forest service.

May says smoke from a forest fire can be seen several kilometres away in the air, depending on how big the fire is, how high you're flying and whether the fire is just smouldering or crowning — engulfing the tree tops.

However, as a novice fire-spotter, May says she has difficulty determing whether smoke is coming from a legitimate campfire, or a forest fire.

It's difficult to get close enough to the smoke to make that distinction, she says, because federal air regulations require visual flight-rule pilots to fly at least 150 metres above the ground in a rural area.

The Flying 99s wanted to start a Skywatch program in the province — a pollution-monitoring program begun by the Ontario chapter in co-operation with the province's environment ministry two years ago — but when B.C. government officials gave the idea a lukewarm reception, they turned to the forest ministry.

"We thought Firebatch would be more useful in B.C. where the forest is really our lifeline," says May.

Last year a near-record 3,800 forest fires destroyed more than 30,000 hectares of B.C. forest. So far this year 862 fires have destroyed 43,000 hectares, and the busiest fire month, August, is yet to arrive.

About 35 per cent of all fires are reported by the general public, says Ken Lines, forests protection branch spokesman.

"The more people you have looking for fires, the more chance of spotting something before it becomes really big," says May.

Most of the members of the B.C. Flying 99s chapter are recreational pilots who fly single-engined light aircraft under visual flight rules, says past chairman Judy Williams.

Employers study writing

TORONTO (CP) — There's not much use minding your Ps and Qs at a job interview if your Ts have already given you away.

Many employers are asking for handwritten job applications, believing handwriting reveals a great deal about a person, says Diann Bureau, a graphoanalyst who teaches weekend courses in handwriting analysis to company personnel officers and social workers.

Bureau says writing analysis is the scientific study of individual strokes in the writing and that studies have shown handwriting can reveal as much about a person as three days of psychological tests.

Bureau also does analysis for court cases, which she says requires years of training.

Given a list of the characteristics needed for a job, a trained graphoanalyst "can take a stack of letters and winnow it down to three or four people who would be right for the job."

"The only way to change your writing is to do it so slowly that you're drawing the letters. That's easy to spot because it looks so stilted."

Bureau confesses that she was skeptical at first, but she was converted when her own handwriting was analysed at a meeting in Boston.

"They started saying things even my mother didn't know — personal things they couldn't have known."

Jacob Barnard . . . better balance

Baby gets a new hold

CLEVELAND (AP) — Some parents try to discourage the practice; but Irene and Neal Barnard are thrilled to see their one-year-old son Jacob sucking his thumb.

Jacob, the victim of a birth defect, was born without thumbs in October, 1978. In May, orthopedic surgeon Avrum Froimson transformed Jacob's right index finger into a thumb through an operation known as pollicization — from the Latin word for thumb, pollex — and Jacob has adapted well, his parents say.

"This is my love," said Froimson, recently named director of orthopedic surgery at Mt. Sinai Hospital.

During the two-hour procedure, Jacob's index finger was detached, shortened by cutting out a piece of bone and moved into the normal thumb position. Froimson said the process requires intense concentration and use of magnifying glasses.

"He reacted just like it had always been there," said Mrs. Barnard. "He seems to have better balance holding things now."

When he was younger, Jacob used his feet to play with toys, she said. But he had learned to pick things up with his hands even before the operation.

The Barnards said they and doctors wanted to correct the defect before Jacob became too old, to enable him to develop his hand skills more normally.

The child was born with a variety of defects, collectively known as the Holt-Oram, or hand-heart syndrome. Doctors say it is probable he has a heart

It's kingfisher by a beak in N. Saanich

Somehow it's not surprising that the bright-eyed little fellow who dives headlong into scrounging a living is holding a slight edge over the tall, scowling aristocrat who looks down his nose and expects sustenance to come to him.

But that's how it is in North Saanich, where the belted kingfisher has 67 votes to the great blue heron's 60.

North Saanich Ald. Jay Rangel said Monday the public's voting for a an official bird and flower for the municipality is following expert opinion as to which species would be most appropriate.

"People in North Saanich must be up on their natural history," Rangel said.

Residents have until Sept. 1 to vote on the choices.

In addition to the kingfisher and heron, the ballot lists (with totals to date in brackets): pelagic cormorant (24), rufous hummingbird (23), osprey (21), screech owl (12), pileated woodpecker (9), downy woodpecker (7).

The hooded merganser, chickadee, bald eagle, golden eagle, California quail and red-winged blackbird have all received fewer than three votes each.

After the white fawn lily and the honeysuckle are the calypso orchid (18), Nootka rose (17), shooting star (14), western columbine (12), camas lily (11), Columbian tiger lily (9), trillium (2) and wild buckwheat (1).

Ballots are available at the Panorama Leisure Centre and the library next to Sanscha Hall, or residents can phone the municipal hall at 656-3918, or write to the municipality at 1612 Mills Road.

Teacher union fears layoffs

Teacher layoffs caused by shifting pupil enrolment in Victoria have been kept to a minimum this year, but teachers' leader Ron Wickstrom expects more drastic measures in the next three or four years.

The Greater Victoria Teachers' Association (GVTA) president said the decline in secondary enrolments has meant dropping about 35 teachers, mostly by attrition.

Between 20 and 25 teachers retired or moved to other districts and 10 or 12 on one-year temporary contracts did not have their contracts renewed.

No teachers with tenure were laid off, but some who were teaching at the secondary level switched to elementary classrooms or are taking summer training that will qualify them for elementary posts in September.

The demand for elementary teachers is greater than for secondary jobs because pupil enrolment continues to grow from kindergarten to Grade 8.

Wickstrom said this trend will bottom out by about 1984, barring unforeseen developments. But next year, and for the following three years, there will be fewer teachers departing from District 61 through retirement and other attrition.

"It will be tougher to decide," Wickstrom suggested.

Meanwhile, GVTA continues to press for earlier full recognition of qualified teachers. He said the district has a number of teachers on one-year contracts who have been in that position for more than one year.

If the association succeeds in getting tenure for all teachers after a satisfactory probation period, the administration will find it more difficult to lay off surplus teachers.

But if the school board agreed to improve the pupil teacher ratio to the provincial average, he said, there would be a need for 75 more teachers in the district, more than enough to take care of the situation.

Heritage status interest lagging

Esquimalt council Monday night decided to continue its present policy of allowing owners of specified houses to seek heritage designation.

But heritage committee chairman Barry Gilbert said there wasn't enough interest in heritage designation in Esquimalt to warrant the formation of a special advisory committee of council.

So far, only a single Lampson Street resident has applied for heritage designation and that application is still being considered.

Under the present policy, the building department is to notify council of all applications for structural changes to or demolitions of any of the 20 buildings listed in the Hallmark Society's report.

Details on such matters as tax advantages and owner responsibility have yet to be determined, Gilbert said.

In other business, council instructed the fire committee to look into the use of the municipality's police and fire communications system to activate fire calls from View Royal.

A proposal from a Vancouver advertising firm to install and maintain bus shelters along Esquimalt Road in exchange for the privilege of selling advertising on the structures is to be investigated by the public works committee.

Newfie whale tale beached by strike

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — It may have started in Los Angeles, but strike by the California-based Screen Actors Guild strike has moved east, all the way to Newfoundland.

Kanterow's violin dazzles again

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It was "All Mozart" night at the Victoria International Festival on Monday — in addition to being one of the concerto evenings.

Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra conducted by William Shookhoff, played a program that brought to the solo spot for the second consecutive concert, the dazzling violin artistry of Jean-Jacques Kanterow.

Pianist Robin McCabe replaced British pianist John Ogdon who was suddenly called back to London on Sunday. Ogdon is scheduled to return for appearances July 29 and Aug. 3.

Kanterow, who is one-third of the exceptional French Trio Rouvier-Kanterow-Muller, had brought his audience to its feet in acclaim on Sunday when he performed a lengthy group of brilliant and beautiful pieces under the title, "bis celebre" or encores.

He is in every sense a master of his instrument, obtaining from it at all times precisely the effect he desires by means of a highly articulate and sensitive bowing arm and incredible fingerboard dexterity.

His reading of the D Major Concerto No. 4, K. 118, skirted the concept of pure classicism, being clearly marked by his own response to the music, but in another way this heightened the joy and luminosity that abounds in the work.

Shookhoff, who is always intently and sympathetically aware of the soloist, conducted the orchestra with great finesse, maintaining vitality through delicate passages that allowed the solo violin to exploit pristine-pure pianissimos in the highest range.

Playing the Concerto No. 21 in C Major, K. 467, McCabe, one of the festival's stalwarts in providing consistently thoughtful, artistic and technically impressive performances, displayed a finely controlled dynamic range and a decorative elegance in her treatment of cadenzas and florid passage work. Her handling of the lyrical andante was delightfully poised; expressive without being unduly sentimental.

The orchestra responded well throughout although there were episodes of doubtful intonation. The interplay of theme between orchestra and soloist in the rondo was particularly successful.

One or two more rehearsals would have brought the orchestra's performance of the Symphony No. 41 (Jupiter) in C Major, into tip-top shape. Under Shookhoff's baton good things abounded; in spirit it was vivacious, the rhythm was well maintained and there was some particularly effective phrasing in the andante cantabile section. But there were moments of imprecision, notably in attack. Nothing was seriously wrong and much was good but there was a sense of instability that at times permeated the performance. Rehearsal time is difficult to come by but this was an instance where just a little more work would have made a great deal of difference.

Tonight the first of three "Keyboard Opulence" concerts will take place at the McPherson. Pianists to be heard will be McCabe, Ruth Laredo and Bela Siki. Laredo will play Rachmaninoff, McCabe, Chopin and the great Verdi-Liszt Rigoletto paraphrase, and Siki, Mozart's Sonata in B flat Major K. 333.

BRIGHTON, England (Reuter) — The International Whaling Commission today rejected proposals for a ban on commercial whaling.

Canada was to spell out publicly today why it had opposed the ban.

Moore said it was a sop to Canada's Inuit citizens, and also indicated a refusal by Ottawa to admit any international interference with Canadian territorial waters.

The vote was 13 in favor of the moratorium, nine against and two abstentions. A three-quarter vote in favor was needed for a ban.

Japan and the Soviet Union, major whaling countries, led the fight against the moratorium, proposed at the commission's annual meeting by the United States, France and the Netherlands.

Conservationists have argued that if commercial whaling is not stopped soon whales may become extinct within 10 years.

Countries voting in favor of the moratorium were: Australia, Argentina, Denmark, France, New Zealand, the Netherlands, Mexico, Oman, the Seychelles, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Opposed — in addition to Canada — were Chile, Iceland, Japan, South Korea, Peru, South Africa, Spain and the Soviet Union.

Abstaining were Brazil and Norway.

Woman PM for Dominica

Another plant drowns in Chrysler's red ink

Times News Services

DETROIT — Battered by the auto industry's worst recession since the 1930s, the struggling Chrysler Corp. has made another retreat.

As part of a new effort to trim losses expected to exceed $1 billion this year, the No. 3 automaker Monday ordered a seventh plant closed and scaled down operations at another.

Chrysler, said it will close its Huber Avenue Foundry in Detroit and will consolidate press room operations at its Mack Stamping Plant, also in Detroit, with other stamping operations in Michigan and Ohio.

The foundry currently employs 1,283 hourly and salaried workers, the company said, while 450 hourly and 75 salaried workers at the stamping plant will be idled.

Chrysler said laid-off stamping plant workers will be offered jobs at other facilities. Another 1,300 workers at the Mack plant will remain on the job in manufacturing operations unaffected by the move.

Separately, Ford Motor Co. said it is cutting heavy-duty truck production at a plant near Louisville, Ky., July 28, laying off 1,660 hourly workers and 120 salaried employees.

Carter does rain dance on hustings

Times News Services

President Carter, promising to pray for rain and cooler weather in sun-scorched states, says he will hasten federal aid to Texas farmers and urge federal agencies to "do everything possible to alleviate the drought and intense heat wave."

Thunderstorms on Monday in parts of the southern and southwestern United Staates brought some relief from three weeks of near-40° temperatures, but also brought flooding that forced residents in at least one state to leave their homes.

Forecasters warn the deadly heat wave could continue indefinitely and there is more concern the nation's breadbasket might come up emptier at harvest time.

"Our dry-land corn has had it. It's just burned up," Nebraska extension agent Allen Boettcher said.

And the flow of commerce was threatened along the Mississippi River. Coast Guard officials said barges have begun scraping the river bottom because water levels have fallen so low.

"We're trying to do everything we can," Carter said as he surveyed a parched field of grain sorghum in Justin, Tex.

"We'll be praying for rain and cooler weather," added the president, who is facing a stiff challenge from Republican challenger Ronald Reagan in the November elections.

Richard Alexander, an official of the U.S. agriculture department, said the farmland Carter inspected has yielded only 200 pounds of sorghum an acre, down from a projected 3,500 pounds an acre.

Senator David Pryor (Dem.—Ark.) said he was "appalled and frustrated" because the Farmers Home Administration has not declared the state a heat-wave disaster area. The Small Business Administration declared a disaster area in the state last Thursday.

Temperatures in both Arkansas and Missouri cooled somewhat on Monday, but hot weather and increased humidity were expected to return by the end of the week. High temperatures in the 30s were reported Monday in Arkansas, while in Missouri only Joplin reported a temperature of 40° or higher.

In Mississippi, 128 millimetres of rain Monday brought some relief from the heat, but forced more than 1,000 residents to leave their homes. The National Weather Service placed the entire Mississippi Delta under a flood watch Monday night.

Billions of dollars in crops, cattle and poultry have been wiped out by the blistering heat. Food industry officials said prices would rise substantially if conditions immediately returned to normal.

Joe socks Hong Kong as Kim heads for Guam

HONG KONG (UPI) — Typhoon Joe, packing winds of more than 160 kilometres an hour, bore down on southern China today but first took its toll on Hong Kong, bringing the crown colony to a virtual standstill.

Two people died in Hong Kong as the typhoon approached and 59 others were injured by broken glass and falling debris. The deaths occurred when scaffolding on a construction site collapsed hurling one workman to the ground and killing one passerby.

The typhoon roared through the northern Philippines Monday battering the rice and coconut producing areas on the main island of Luzon. Heavy rain caused flash floods in metropolitan Manila and triggered landslides in Baguio, 290 km north of Manila.

Another typoon, Kim, the ninth of the year, sprang up in waters north of Yap Island in the western Pacific today and was moving west-northwest at 57 km/h toward Guam and the Philippines.

Typhoon Joe's center winds never came closer than 190 miles south of Hong Kong and by the late afternoon the Royal Observatory said it was on a west to northwest path bearing down on Hainan Island and Leizhou Peninsula in southern China.

First day a dud at draft office

Times News Services

Post offices around the United States were ringed with sign-waving demonstrators chanting "Don't register" as young men began registering with the selective service system amid protests that generally were peaceful.

There were no reported that the protests had interfered with the registration program, which will affect four million men born in 1960 and 1961.

Draft registration began Monday after last-minute efforts to block it, but was being challenged as unconstitutional because it excludes women, and the U.S. Supreme Court is expected to hear the case later this year.

American Civil Liberties Union lawyer David Landau said the registration program has created "an enormous potential for invasion of the First Amendment" free speech rights.

Meanwhile, the U.S. consulate in Vancouver denied charges by a pacifist group that it was actively searching out Americans living in British Columbia to register them for the draft.

Spokesman Tom Marquis said Monday the consulate had set up 12 temporary offices throughout the province to "make it easier" for those Americans living in B.C. to obtain the forms necessary for the registration.

But, he said, "we have no mandate, nor do we have the facilities or the manpower available, to seek out, identify or report on every American who fails to register for the draft."

Raid only hinted: freed hostage

BUT HE'S SMILING NOW! Twelve-year-old Walter Polovchak of Chicago reportedly is elated after learning the U.S. government has granted him political asylum. Meanwhile, Walter — who ran away from home to avoid returning with his parents to their native Ukraine — has been placed in the custody of a Ukrainian-American family.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — They sensed something was in the wind, but the American hostages in Iran learned nothing specific of the abortive attempt to rescue them in April nor of the eight military men who died during the operation.

Richard Queen, the ailing hostage who was released last week, said he only found out about the failed U.S. rescue mission two hours before he was released and put on a plane for Switzerland earlier this month. And, he said, there was no noticeable change in the hostage's daily routine after the mission, tending to discount Iranian claims that all the hostages had been dispersed around the country.

However, he was not surprised to hear about the rescue attempt, Queen recalled: "We thought they planned something and then called it off."

It was not clear how he got a hint of the raid, but Queen, who speaks some Farsi, was able to hear the Iranian state radio blaring through loudspeakers outside the embassy compound. Conditions did not change for Queen after the failed rescue, and he was not moved to other quarters, he said.

Queen was to meet with the relatives of the remaining 52 hostages today and tell them the others appear to be surviving their nine months of imprisonment in reasonably good condition.

Prior to the press conference, the bearded Queen, 28, removed his glasses to wipe away tears, as he was greeted by hundreds of his State Department colleagues, including three women who were released from their captivity in Tehran in November.

In Tehran, meanwhile, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who took office in early February, was formally sworn in today at a special session of the Majlis, the Iranian parliament.

The 270-seat house assumed its full legislative functions on Sunday with the election of a speaker. It spent seven weeks dealing with organizational matters.

On Wednesday, the president is expected to nominate a prime minister, who will require the endorsement of the Majlis, in which the clergy-dominated Islamic Republican Party forms the largest group.

The British embassy in Tehran said five journalists working for British, Danish and Turkish television organizations were arrested Monday by Iranian authorities.

Sources in Tehran said the five were arrested at their hotel rooms by revolutionary guards and taken to Revolutionary Central Committee headquarters for questioning.

The number of executions Sunday and Monday rose to 15 as the official Pars news agency reported six "counter-revolutionaries" were put to death in Dezfoul, south of Tehran, for importing arms, unauthorized crossing into Iraq, armed resistance, maintaining links with subversive groups and bombing railway crossings and oil pipelines.

Zimbabwe files UN application

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Zimbabwe has applied to become the 153rd member of the United Nations.

In a telegram to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, Zimbabwe's prime minister, Robert Mugabe, has asked that his country be admitted at a special session of the General Assembly scheduled to begin August 25.

Terrorists bomb bus

LOGRONO, Spain (AP) — Terrorists, believed to be Basque separatists, set off bombs under a bridge today blasting a bus carrying federal policemen to target practice. Authorities said one officer was killed and 20 others were injured.

(5 sets to be won)

HOW TO PLAY

Locked inside the "SUMMERFUNTHING" safe are many valuable prizes. Some of those prizes could be yours if you find the correct PASSWORD that opens the combination lock. It's an exciting game that's fun and easy to enter. The instructions on the dial give you the position of the letters in the "SUMMERFUNTHING" PASSWORD. All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you started at the letter E and the instructions read 2nd LETTER-FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER-EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter: SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each day's password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question.
2. Winners from the previous week will be published in the Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist.
3. It is not necessary for contestants to buy the Colonist or Times to enter the SUMMERFUNTHING contest. An exact drawing of the entry form printed in the Colonist or Times may be made on a plain piece of paper. Note: copies produced by any other process will not be accepted.
4. The SUMMERFUNTHING judges will have the final decision on any interpretation of Game rules.
5. As a condition of receiving prizes, recipients agree to allow publication of their names and pictures in the Colonist or Times for no additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all rules. No prize substitutions.

ANGLING FORWARD, Kevin Courtney, 3, searches for easy prey in the Lumberman's Arch pool in Vancouver's Stanley Park Sunday. Kevin's fishing expedition was inspired by the annual park board fishing derby for kids.

Plans are afoot to ask the big industrial city which seems soon to become Victoria's twin for a donation to the Gate of Harmonious Interest planned for the entrance to Victoria's Chinatown.

The big red, green and yellow ceremonial arch at Fisgard and Government is a key part in the city's million dollar Chinatown revitalization program, but less than half of the projected $100,000 cost has been raised so far.

The Chinese in Victoria have come up with $31,000 and the non-Chinese business community has raised about $9,000 to date of a projected $25,000. The B.C. government was earmarked for the remaining amount, but there is as yet no commitment.

Ald. Bob Wright and Mayor Bill Tindall discussed Monday the possibility of suggesting to Suchow it might want to participate, although the mayor stressed that Victoria doesn't want to leave the impression it is a quid pro quo for agreeing to twin city status.

There's a potential for a contribution to the gateway, the mayor said, and Suchow might want to "take a tangible interest in something here."

Tindall said he hasn't yet replied to a letter from Shanghai, from Pearson College professor Richard Liu, who is visiting China this summer and exploring the twinning arrangement on his own initiative.

But when he informs Liu of council's decision two weeks ago to pursue twinning with Suchow, he will also include a copy of one of the city's planning reports on Chinatown to show the Chinese the city has taken a keen interest in this part of Victoria's heritage.

The mayor also said there is a strong indication the Provincial Capital Commission will come up with a donation to the gateway and the whole clean-up project as well. The PCC discusses the matter Wednesday, he said.

St. Charles mansion 'Illahie' proposed as heritage house

Heritage designation of 1041 St. Charles Street was recommended Monday by council's heritage advisory committee to stave off a threat of demolition.

He added that four single family lots could be carved out of the 9/10 of an acre property if the 1907 Samuel Maclure home was bulldozed. Now it contains seven suites.

"The committee has to designate that home, it's just too important," said chairman Terry Reksten.

Heritage building guidelines adopted

Prepared by architect John Keay and Hallmark Society president Stuart Stark, the guidelines are designed to ensure long-term stability of the buildings and restoration and retention of historic features.

The guidelines also propose that an owner be required to carry out research in the city and provincial archives on the history of his building before the city allows alterations.

Wright resigns heritage post

Saying he had too much on his plate and that heritage matters are in good hands without him, Ald. Bob Wright resigned Monday from city council's heritage advisory committee.

"There are some committees I'd be afraid to leave," Wright said, but the heritage committee has been effective and members work hard.

"You people have made me look good," he added.

Wright listed several of his civic responsibilities — chairman of council's land use planning committee, fire prevention committee, the Capital Regional District's sewage subcommittee.

"That could really bring tears to my eyes," he said concerning the sewage portfolio, which involves finding solutions to the Clover Point and McMicking Point outfall controversies.

He is also involved in the Chinatown revitalization project and is managing director of the B.C. Steamship Co. which operates the Victoria Princess ferry to Seattle. He also has extensive business interests.

College adviser named

Joan Richardt, former Camosun College community education services coordinator, has been picked by the Open Learning Institute (OLI) as its regional adviser.

The institute provides educational opportunities at home for those who can't attend a regular college because of their jobs or other commitments or because they live in a remote community.

"I aim to provide the best possible service to the students who contact me and to let people in the Vancouver Island community know about ways in which OLI or other post-secondary institutions can be of use to them," Richardt said.

Perched on a high, sunny acre overlooking a 60-acre park is a unique and exceptionally, well-planned, family home comprising over 2400 sq. ft. on 6 levels, with 4 fireplaces, 3 bedrooms, 3 baths, sunken living room, family room, office and more. Each level provides a separate activity area. The center of activity surrounds a fabulous kitchen and dining enclave. The dining room is spacious (16'3"x14'), cedar vaulted, and has its own heatilator fireplace. Across the hall is a streamlined almond arborite kitchen, superbly outfitted for the preparation of the most extravagant feast. Adjoining is a utility and sewing room and through the sliding glass doors 900 sq. ft. of terraced decks, extend the full length of the house (also accessible from the living room and family room). Another equally exciting feature is the sumptuous master bedroom suite tucked away, at the top of the stairs, on the top level, 500 sq. ft. in all, it includes a bedroom (21'10"x10'6") with vaulted cedar ceiling, warm fireplace, and private Romeo and Juliet balcony, adjoining a huge dressing room and tiled 5-pce. (bidet) bath. Only the lingering aromas from the kitchen could lure you away. Among the many extras to tempt you are: 4 skylights, sauna, wiring for stereo throughout, exposed aggregate drive, no maintenance landscaping, floor of quarry tile, parquet oak flooring and much more but the finest feature of all is the functional flow of inter-related spaces. It is a home that captures the sophisticated concepts of modern living. See it and you'll agree. $169,000. Follow the arrows from Landsend Rd.

"SEAFRONT SUMMER"
or winter home on emerald green Pierce Island, a shangri-la on the very door step of the Saanich Pennisula just 10 minutes from Swartz Bay. (no, there's no bridge!) This weekend the little fishing boats from the island are scurring around with the friendly gulf island seals surging for that illusive salmon, cod or what ever in the annual Pierce Island fishing derby. Next month its family day at the Annual Picnic where it is fun, racing, dug-a-war, corn on the cob or what ever else is on the menu. Friends from distance parts of the world drop in to exchange greetings with their Victoria, Vancouver, Pierce Island neighbors and enjoy annual holidays. Just listed July 16 is a professionally constructed home of 2 bedrooms with a huge old brick heatilator fireplace in livingroom and tongue and groove mellowed cedar on the ceiling. The bathroom, 4 piece, with vanity and colourful tile, just glistens and a speedy electric heater fan provides instant heat on chilly evenings. 2 bedrooms are framed in with louvered closet doors and good cupboard space. If you are handy with tools you'll enjoy doing a little finishing on the interior to your own taste. Furnished nicely and ready for your summer or winter living. There is a large wrap around balcony (out door deck lights) where you can sling the hammack or sip a cool one as you lazily watch the world's largest ferry fleet (in the free world) busily plying gulf island waters taking restless vacationers to distant destinations. A separate well constructed 12 x 20 out building is unfinished but was intended for guest cottage. A hand winch operates a boom to hoist your small fishing boat and motor on to the quality constructed concrete seawall. A beautifully treed level lot with fir, cedars and arbutus and just a few well built steps onto the beach. By the way, next door lot can be purchased also. If all this is not enough and you are energetic fish, scuba dive, beach comb, gather bark, stroll or jog 2 miles of road and observe deer or birds on forest woodland paths on the adjacent 150 acre parkland and wildlife sanctuary. Pierce Island, Canada's unique summer cottage community where more than half the island and the finest beach frontage was gifted to the community association (under the statutes of perpetuity). Where the developer's comprehensive planning, the first such planning in the gulf islands has resulted in a protected enviroment with recreation and quality of life. The initial sponsorship of a self governing community association (under the society's act) an intiation of an improvement district (under letters patent from the cabinet) efficiently administers water distribution and volunteer fire department in a unique community created with vision in 1959 and planned 2 years before the Swartz Bay - Tsawassen ferry run was inaugurated. To see Pierce Island call now R. Fraser Biscoe, F.R.I., R.I.(B.C.), Realtor and Seafront Specialist, 417-645 Fort Street, Victoria, 383-9413 (answering service).

The sort of cold, wet spring weather we endured this year can play merry old havoc with the rose garden. Rust and black spot especially thrive under wet conditions. This year I have had so many gardening friends complaining specifically about the disfigurement of their cherished roses with black spot.

This fungus disease appears in black, circular spots on the leaves anywhere from an eighth of an inch to half an inch across. The margins of the spots are not usually regular and may be surrounded with a sort of yellow halo. If the disease gets a good hold, it can just about defoliate a plant. Sometimes the canes are marred as well, with reddish-purple markings.

Black spot, if not checked, will become worse from year to year because the fungus survives on the diseased leaves and canes. Fungus spores are spread by rain splash and the disease just generally flourishes in cool, damp conditions.

Knowing how a disease spreads gives us our best clues for checking it. In fact, to combat the three big rose problems — rust, mildew and black spot — preventive measures are the same.

First, keep fallen leaves picked up and burned. Take away all prunings and burn them. In the fall, when you do just a very light pruning of straggly canes to prevent winter wind damage to them, pick up all fallen foliage at the same time, remove it and burn it. Then, in spring, when you do your big pruning job, don't be afraid to prune drastically. I like to remove all but four or five canes at ground level and the remaining canes I cut back to an out-turning bud at about a foot-and-a-half to two feet (45 to 60 cm) above soil level.

I'm just a drastic pruner by nature but this may have a lot to do with avoiding these fungus diseases — the more that is cut off in spring, the more likely you are to be rid of any unwanted organisms lurking in the canes.

If you spring-prune early, before the buds start to grow, then give a dormant spray of lime sulphur, one part lime sulphur to one part water. To keep trouble-free during the season, standard recommended procedure is to spray with a fungicide like Benomyl every two weeks.

Having said that, I would like to share with you some of a recent reading "search" I have made of alternate methods of dealing with some of these rose problems. We all have probably heard of growing garlic or chive under roses to reduce aphids and intensify blossom scent.

I know one lady who swears she gets complete control of black spot by watering with soap flakes. She shaves Sunlight soap into hot water, shakes it up to dissolve it, dilutes it and waters it on the bushes. She keeps doing this throughout the season and the result is new foliage that is blemish-free.

One chemical company is doing intensive research on soaps. Soaps are likely our oldest known pesticides. Soaps are all fatty acids neutralized with a base. Some fatty acids are highly toxic to insects. Specific fatty acids spare beneficial insects but affect the destructive ones. Many fatty acids are highly bacteriacidal and some are fungicidal. It often seems that more and more the Old Wives are being proved wise by science.

Another tip I read about is to clean the soil completely below the roses at pruning time and leave it exposed to the sun for a time to help "sterilize" the soil. Once the soil has had a good bake, it is mulched with compost or hay.

Watering roses by trickling the water on the ground rather than sprinkling will help restrict the spread of fungus diseases as well. Overhead sprinkling in the evening is a special invitation to trouble since the foliage cannot dry off before night.

Many of us consider that the only proper and aesthetically pleasing method of growing roses is in a bed of their own. Then, we can say elegantly, "Please do come and see my rose garden." However, it would surely be more practical to grow roses, not in beds of their own, but doted round the garden among the perennial plants.

This way, if any particular pest or disease settled on one rose bush it would not automatically pass on to the next one. Also, perennials are pruned in much the same way as roses — just cut back lightly in the fall, the major pruning done in the spring — and so they can become companions of convenience for the gardener.

Ban KKK, MLA urges

The B.C. government should condemn the Ku Klux Klan, which is actively organizing in the province, Emery Barnes (NDP — Vancouver Centre) said Monday.

But government members refused to allow him to make such a motion in the legislature.

"We cannot as a society turn a blind eye to the history of racial attack and brutalization on the part of members of the Ku Klux Klan," Barnes, one of two black members in the legislature.

"This organization has no place in British Columbia's society."

Public attention was drawn to Klan activities in the province when Grand Wizard David Duke was in Vancouver in May but deported because of a Louisiana conviction for inciting to riot.

Conflict of interest laws weak - Barber

B.C.'s conflict-of-interest laws are grossly inadequate, Charles Barber (NDP — Victoria) said Monday.

He wants Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm to hire a full-time inspector of municipalities whose job it would be to investigate and, if necessary, prosecute, charges of conflict-of-interest at the local government level.

Such an inspector could help establish a new code of ethics for elected and senior appointed officials at the local government level.

"We're sick and tired of hearing from people about all of the investigations and the allegations and currently the 17 separate police investigations going on around British Columbia on conflict-of-interest."

Barber said the Union of B.C. Municipalities has already requested the inspector be hired, but the Social Credit party has been so preoccupied with its own scandals and inquiries that it hasn't had time to do it.

Beer workers face lockout ultimatum

The contract dispute between the Brewery Workers Union and the three major beer companies in B.C. is coming to the crunch.

A 13-hour bargaining session broke off early today in Vancouver with a demand by the companies that the 1,000 workers accept the industry's current offer by midnight Friday — or face an industry-wide lockout.

Eric Harris, chief negotiator for Labatt, Molson and Carling O'Keefe, said the companies offered a $1-an-hour wage increase in each year of a three-year agreement. This, he said, amounted to a 29.7-per-cent increase and would raise the typical pay of a worker on the bottle line to $27,000 a year.

Union president John Langley said wages had hardly been discussed and were not the main issue.

"We're not that far away on money but there's a lot more than money here," Langley said. "This is a union security issue. We're going to ask the whole labor movement in B.C. to back us up on this one — they (the breweries) are in for a big fight."

Harris said management's ultimatum was brought on by work slowdowns which had been hampering production for a week.

"We've informed the union that this restriction on operations has forced us to put a time frame on this matter because we can't permit it to continue," Harris said.

The union president said the two sides are far from a settlement on the language of a contract.

Victoria-area liquor stores are getting beer on a rotating basis so, on a given day, some will have it and others won't.

A check this morning of four outlets showed that two had a normal amount and two had none.

In the event of a strike or lockout, the supply of American beer could dry up as well as the domestic variety.

During a three-month brewery strike-lockout in 1978, the B.C. liquor control board allowed larger than normal imports of American beer to ease the shortage.

However, the brewery union recently affiliated with the B.C. Government Employees Union and Langley said earlier in the current dispute that his union is considering asking the BCGEU to seek a "hot" declaration from the B.C. Federation of Labor which would effectively halt the sale of U.S. beer in the province.

Heart attack fells Sellers

LONDON (UPI) — Film star Peter Sellers suffered a cardiac arrest today and doctors treating him said he was "gravely ill."

Sellers, 54, who was rushed by ambulance to Middlesex Hospital because of a massive heart attack, underwent "intensive resuscitation" procedures in the emergency room area after his heart stopped.

The actor's fourth wife, actress Lynne Frederick, was in Hollywood and the hospital said it understood she would be flying to see her husband.

Sellers, 54, who has a history of heart trouble, was in his suite at the Dorchester Hotel when he complained of chest pains. His secretary, Michael Jefferies, summoned a nurse who immediately called in a doctor. The actor was last hospitalized with heart trouble several months ago in Ireland.

Key search pays off

A set of keys found on a traffic victim — and six hours spent checking apartments in the Jubilee area — has led to the identification of a woman who died Sunday after being struck on Oak Bay Avenue.

City police said the 77-year-old woman carried no money or identification and they assumed she had just stepped out of a nearby apartment for an after dinner stroll.

Eleanor McNabb, 101-2056 Oak Bay, received multiple injuries when in collision with a car near Davie about 7 p.m. three blocks from her home. The driver was Janice Godard, 25, of 946 Ellery.

Police confirmed through a locksmith two keys found on the victim were for the street door and apartment door of a block of suites. But the locksmith could not identify which block out of many in the district.

Officers began their search by trying the front doors of apartment buildings between Fort Street and Oak Bay Avenue and by 11 p.m. Monday they had located the block.

Because of its size and the late hour, they were reluctant to try individual room doors after tenants had retired for the night. Police postponed the room check until this morning.

But at 1 a.m. a relative called police to report the family had not heard from their mother and could not reach her apartment.

When police suggested a connection with the accident victim, the relative was able to identify the woman temporarily through her personal effects and confirmed it this morning.

Fireman rammed, run over

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city fireman was injured Monday when a fire truck was rammed by a car and the car's driver returned to run him over.

Police said the incident began when a fire truck was preparing to back into the fire hall. They said a car blocked the way into the hall and the fireman spoke to the driver. The driver of the car then rammed the fire truck, knocking off a door and injuring the fireman.

If you think this is hot . . .

LAFAYETTE, La. (UPI) — Blazing temperatures and a broken air conditioner prompted visiting preacher the Rev. Al Maschareno to treat his congregation to one of the shortest sermons on record.

The two sentence sermon was:

"You think it's hot up here? Stay away from down there," he said, pointing to the floor — and beyond.

FLIGHT OF FANCY ended in Baie Comeau, Quebec today for would-be transatlantic flyer Eagle Sarmont who was told this morning he has been officially grounded. The federal transport department ruled Sarmont's motorized hang glider, dubbed "the spirit of California," is an aircraft and must meet several regulations before it can go any further. Sarmont, who had hoped to resume his trip to Paris today said he is going to lobby to have the ruling changed. Sarmont was met by RCMP officers Monday as he climbed out of his glider after being forced to land by impending darkness

Three potentially dangerous William Head prisoners escaped Monday night by cutting their way out of a dormitory and using a section of the prison wharf as a raft.

The raft was found early today a short distance from the prison at Weir's Beach.

Officials are uncertain what tool the inmates used to cut their way out of the dormitory or how it was obtained.

The escapers — the 8th, 9th and 10th this year — are:

Stephen John Thomas Johnson, 23, six feet three inches, medium brown hair, blue eyes and a two-inch scar on his forehead.

All were serving time for breaking and entering offences. Johnson also had been convicted of a number of minor offences, and an earlier escape attempt.

The escape occurred between 11:15 p.m. Monday night and 2:40 this morning.

Since the beginning of this year four other escapes have occurred at the medium-security institution.

In January two inmates tried to swim from the prison and are believed to have drowned.

In February two inmates again took to the water but were captured later.

Earlier this month in two separate attempts three inmates escaped and haven't been recaptured. One of them built his own raft.

Prison director Arlie Bender said the escapes aren't connected to unrest about conditions in the prison.

"We've done a complete analysis of the escapes and there seem to be no common reason."

Bender said the majority of the escapers are young and relatively new to the institution.

The prison will be installing a new look-out post further down the beach later this year as well as improving lighting in an attempt to discourage escapes. The prison is built on a peninsula.

Blockade sought to crush military junta in Bolivia

LA PAZ (AP) — Bolivian political and labor leaders called today for an international economic blockade to help bring down the military junta that overthrew the civilian government last week.

The Committee for the Defence of Democracy, in a statement distributed secretly to embassies, accused Gen. Luis Garcia Meza's forces of killing opponents and dumping their bodies in common graves; arresting or driving into hiding hundreds of politicians and union leaders, depriving Bolivians of all but official versions of the news and censoring reports by foreign correspondents.

The military regime has admitted only two dead since last Thursday's coup and has refused to say how many persons have been arrested. Reliable sources have reported at least four additional fatalities.

The committee, formed last year amid rumors of an impending coup by ultra-conservative military officers, also asked all states to withhold recognition of the military chiefs who overthrew interim President Lydia Gueiler to block the election of former president Hernan Siles Zuazo, a leftist, to succeed her.

"No government that is at all humanistic could recognize a bunch of uniformed psychopaths," said the statement, signed by five members of the committee. Most of the committee are in hiding.

As of Monday night, no government had recognized the new regime and the takeover has been condemned by the United States and democratically governed states in Latin America.

Despite the imposition of martial law, sporadic street fighting continued at night in La Paz, and more fighting was reported in the southern tin-mining areas.

Loansharks outlawed, maximum interest 60%

OTTAWA (CP) — The government introduced legislation Monday to officially outlaw loansharking and to allow credit unions to compete with banks in offering small loans to consumers.

But Progressive Conservative objections to a provision making it a criminal offence to charge more than 60 per cent annual interest on a loan blocked immediate passage of the bill. It is unclear whether it will become law before the Commons summer recess, scheduled to begin this week.

The legislation would repeal the Small Loans Act, which prevents credit unions, caisses populaires, trust companies and loan companies — but not banks — from charging more than 12 per cent interest on loans under $1,500.

The law was enacted 40 years ago to ensure that needy people would be able to get loans at reasonable interest rates.

The 12-per-cent limit was added in 1956 when the bank rate, now over 10 per cent, was only three per cent.

When rates on consumer loans soared to almost 20 per cent earlier this year, small loans regulated by this act dried up, forcing some desperate people to turn to loansharks, the consumer affairs department said in a paper released Monday.

The proliferation of credit cards has made small loans under this act less important, the department said. They account for less than 0.5 per cent of all consumer credit today.

While removing the ceiling on small loans, the bill would go after loansharks by making it an offence under the Criminal Code to charge more than 60 per cent annual interest.

Loansharking itself is not a crime. Police prosecute loansharks on charges of intimidation, assault or extortion arising from their collection techniques.

Gallagher offered apology

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arthur Elworthy, general manager of the B.C. Steamship Corp., wrote a letter Jan. 16 to a cabinet committee appointed by Premier Bill Bennett to investigate and resolve differences between the B.C. Steamship Corp. and its sister corporation, the B.C. Ferry Corp.

A copy of Elworthy's letter was obtained by The Canadian Press which on Feb. 2 distributed a story to its member newspapers. The story, reproducing parts of the letter, was published in the Victoria Times Feb. 2.

Elworthy's letter contained a number of remarks which were highly critical of Charles Gallagher, general manager of the B.C. Ferry Corp. These remarks were and are unjustified and Elworthy and The Canadian Press have apologized to Gallagher for any embarrassment or concern he may have suffered as a result of distribution of the letter's contents. Elworthy and The Canadian Press also have stated that at no time did they intend to impugn the personal honesty, integrity or competence of Gallagher.

New bacteria just eat 2,4-D

Times News Services

Researchers at two U.S. laboratories have announced developments in genetic engineering which hold out hope for mass production of a synthetic insulin and a method of converting the persistent defoliant 2,4,D into an innocuous substance.

At the Battelle Laboratories in Columbus, Ohio, using genetic engineering techniques, scientists have developed bacteria that ingest the compound 2,4-D, a defoliant, and then become an innocuous product that may be converted into salable items such as fertilizers.

The experiment was one of several studies the scientists made to find ways that microorganisms can be used to transform or degrade toxic chemicals such as 2,4-D and DDT into easily disposable products.

The researchers first selected a soil bacterium that used 2,4-D as its carbon source. They then isolated the genes that caused the trait and transferred them to a different host bacterium. This bacterium — a single, undifferentiated cell — readily accepted the donor genes and transmitted the new characteristic to its daughter cells.

The Battelle scientists, Drs. George Kidd and George Pierce, believe that the development of bacteria that can ingest toxic chemicals or pollutants and convert them to other substances has vast potential for industry. They believe that microorganisms may eventually be developed to dispose of industrial wastes, reclaim land or extract useful chemicals.

Meanwhile, scientists in Indianapolis have developed a new type of insulin, created by gene-splicing techniques.

It will be tested on humans before the end of the year, says a spokesman for Eli Lilly and Co., which pioneered the commercial production of insulin.

The pharmaceutical firm is moving ahead with a $40-million project to build plants in the U.S. and in Britain where the hormone will be produced in quantity.

The scientific breakthrough is the first product of Lilly's research program in recombinant DNA technology.

Almost 60 years ago, Lilly pioneered the commercial production of insulin as a result of the scientific discoveries of Canadian doctors Sir Frederick Banting and Charles Best.

Testing of the new type of insulin is already under way on eight healthy volunteers in Britain, Davis said. The research later will progress to diabetics before the insulin is ready to be commercially marketed.

Theoretically, laboratory-created insulin could be produced in unlimited amounts and less expensively than insulin from animal glands. An estimated 8,000 pounds of animal pancreases are needed to produce one pound of pure insulin.

Lions jump into sea jousting

In Venice they do it on the lagoon in long-prowed gondolas, but the town of Sidney plans to use plain, square-ended herring skiffs for its version of the classic sport of sea jousting.

This maritime activity has an ancient and honorable history, and Sidney Lions Club hopes to make it as famous as Nanaimo's bathtub race.

Several Lions gave a demonstration on the weekend of this wet and wonderul sport.

Like King Arthur's knights of the Round Table, sea jousters are equipped with long padded poles. But instead of a steed, they stand at the end of long planks fastened to the bow of a slowly moving boat.

The object is to unhorse, er, dunk your opponent.

Phil Hendry is credited with the idea. He said he watched Venetian gondoliers bashing each other and thought the same sport suitably adapted to West Coast conditions could put Sidney on the map.

"Sidney's come up with a first," Hendry said Monday.

The Sunday affair at Tulista Park on the waterfront (next to the Anacortes ferry dock) will have something for everyone.

"It's a family-oriented day," he said.

There will be a salmon barbecue, hot dogs, pop and ice cream and a fishing derby for the kids with more trophies.

Doctors organize beach clean-up

By AL FORREST

The Victoria Medical Association is urging yacht clubs, commercial fishermen, sports fishermen and other boaters and swimmers to join in a campaign for clean water and beaches.

VMA president Paul Broome said today doctors have become alarmed about a possible health hazard as well as the esthetic questions of sewage in the sea.

"There is a risk of a hepatitis epidemic with so much sewage near the beaches. We are going to put a lot of our energy into this campaign."

Broome said the doctors are looking for support from municipal authorities and from Health Minister Rafe Mair.

In the legislature Monday, Mair said he would study Victoria's polluted beaches to see if there is a case for provincial action.

Broome said doctors realize sewage treatment plants are expensive but there may be no alternative because of the increasing dangers to health.

"We must stop treating the sea as a sewer. We invite tourists to beautiful Victoria and then we ask them to look at this. It's incredible."

The tales, he said, are woeful.

Reports of all types of foreign matter have been reported on and near the beaches.

"Children find these things floating in the water. It's disgraceful. It's not pretty and it is a danger to health."

He recited a long list of items reported by adults and children.

Broome said all yachtsmen and fishermen have an interest in the question, along with swimmers and those who like to stroll the beaches.

"We hope that everyone will become as concerned as we are."

Establishment of treatment plants seemed to be the only solution and funds would have to be found — or Victorians would pay a dearer price in a short time.

Broome said Dr. Romeo Sanglap has been appointed to the VMA environmental committee and will play a key role in gathering information for the campaign.

Sanglap said that longer outfalls are not the answer. Sooner or later the raw sewage returns to the beaches.

He said children can be contaminated by picking up stones on the beaches.

In the legislature Monday Victoria MLA Gordon Hanson asked Mair to show leadership on the pollution problem and call municipal leaders together to find a solution.

Under current cost-sharing formulas, the provincial government would pay 75 per cent of approved costs of sewage treatment facilities.

Wright fights levelling Truth Centre mansion

Dr. Emma Smiley said today the Victoria Truth Centre wants to demolish its century-old Fort Street building which has been placed on the city's heritage list and replace it with a modern church.

The minister ran into some opposition at city council's land use planning committee this morning when Ald. Bob Wright told her council would probably designate the old mansion if the Truth Centre went ahead with its plans without making any changes.

"There isn't one thing about it that's heritage," Smiley said about the building at 1201 Fort, the often-renovated former mansion of Sir Henry Pelling Perew Crease, an early member of the legislature and once attorney-general of B.C.

She said since the Truth Centre bought the house and its three acres of park-like grounds in 1948, there have been many changes and additions.

Rats were running around the building when the church moved in, she said. It was once a three-storey wooden building, now it is a two-storey stucco structure. Eight fancy marble fireplaces were removed by the church and other significant changes were made over the years.

Smiley said architect Darrel Jensen has prepared an angular modern design for a new church to replace the old building.

"We're going to keep all the trees and the park," Jensen said. The church will extend the present small prayer garden at the back of the building around to the front of the property with its broad lawn and garry oak.

Wright told the delegation there were problems with the Truth Centre's proposal. He told them to go to council's heritage advisory committee first and convince them of the need to demolish the existing structure.

He also said that in his opinion, the proposed design — Jensen brought a model of the one-storey building — did not fit in with the heritage nature of upper Fort Street with its restored 19th century houses.

"How about if we sell it to the city for $4 million and we go somewhere else?" Smiley asked with a smile.

"I'd love to do what you'd love us to do," she said. "I believe in cooperation."

But she said the perfect answer for the Truth Centre would be permission to demolish as of Sept. 1.

The committee made no decision on the matter, but decided to let the church's proposal wend its way through the ordinary planning procedure. Jensen said they would go before the heritage committee to explain the proposal.

Saanich fights Minnie writ

Saanich voted by a narrow margin Monday to contest a B.C. Supreme Court writ filed by the Cadboro Bay Residents Association alleging bias on the part of a former alderman in the Minnie Mountain controversy.

In a 4-3 vote led by Mayor Mel Couvelier, council agreed to defend the municipality in the court action — the second attempt by the neighborhood group to void a bylaw which permits a multiple dwelling project to go ahead.

Municipal solicitor Chris Nation said the petitioners want to overturn the bylaw on the grounds that the lawyers acting for the developer were also Saanich's lawyers, and then-alderman Dave Paterson worked for the same firm.

The residents association allegation of bias on the part of Paterson was not allowed in the association's first suit against Saanich, which the municipality and the developer won in the B.C. Court of Appeal.

"But in giving reasons for his judgment the judge more or less invited the group to bring an action on grounds of bias," said Nation.

Since the first court case, the original developers, Broadmead Farms, have sold the 70-acre property in the Ten Mile Point area to R & M Developments and some single family lots have gone on sale.

The proposed townhouse and condominium parts of the project have not yet been started.

KOBYLECKYJ

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria's Ukrainians and their culture will be catalogued and recorded in a unique publication being prepared by several Ukrainian-Canadian students who visited the city Monday.

Oleh Kobyleckyj (that's Ol-ee Kob-a-less-key for those unfamiliar with perogies and cabbage rolls) and three companions arrived on the ferry in the morning, at the halfway point in a 12,000-kilometre cross-Canada trip.

They are documenting as much Ukrainian culture as they can for a non-profit guidebook to be published in the fall.

The Ukrainian Canadian Students' Union organized the project and got an $11,500 grant from the federal multiculturalism secretariat in Ottawa, then Kobyleckyj's group headed west while a fifth student went east through Quebec and the maritimes.

They sent out notices and pre-printed forms in advance trying to get as much information as possible about Ukrainian cultural groups and social organizations. Now they're following up with in-person interviews and searching out Ukrainian roots.

"I've met writers, artists I didn't even know existed. It's really interesting," Kobyleckyj said in an interview Monday.

An example occurred in Calgary. Kobyleckyj said they found a plaque in an auditiorium there to the memory of a famous Ukrainian musician who lived and died in Winnipeg.

Their journey of discovery — the four are driving a small car towing a tent trailer — includes searching out the sites of old villages on the Prairies founded by Ukrainian immigrants.

Houses and buildings are gone but a church and small cemetery remain at some of these bygone communities, Kobyleckyj said. Their book will include the locations of as many as they can find.

They hit the major centres of population along the Trans-Canada Highway and on the return trip starting this week they'll look for signs of Ukrainian culture in small towns and villages across the west. Ontario, bypassed on the way out west, will also be covered on the return.

Alberta with its many Ukrainian communities and organizations was a relatively easy job. Alberta's Ukrainians put together a provincial directory of their own and the students were able to copy much of the information for inclusion in the national source book.

It will be paperback size and Ukrainian businessmen have agreed to help subsidize printing costs, Kobyleckyj said, so it can be sold for around $3.

Divided into seven categories — performing arts and fine arts, academic resources, organizations, landmarks, buildings and monuments — and into the five geographic regions of the nation, the students hope the book will be a comprehensive guide book to things Ukrainian in Canada. The organizers will distribute copies to libraries and newspapers across the country.

If you're of Ukrainian descent or have information that ought to be included, the students want to hear from you. Write to Ukrainian Canadian Cultural Resource Project, 3370 St. Zotique E., Montreal, [illegible]

BRIGHTON, England (Reuter) — The International Whaling Commission today rejected proposals for a ban on commercial whaling.

Patrick Moore, director of the Vancouver-based Greenpeace Foundation, described the decision as disgusting.

Canada was to spell out publicly today why it had opposed the ban.

Moore said it was a sop to Canada's Inuit citizens, and also indicated a refusal by Ottawa to admit any international interference with Canadian territorial waters.

The vote was 13 in favor of the moratorium, nine against and two abstentions. A three-quarter vote in favor was needed for a ban.

Japan and the Soviet Union, major whaling countries, led the fight against the moratorium, proposed at the commission's annual meeting by the United States, France and the Netherlands.

Conservationists have argued that if commercial whaling is not stopped soon whales may become extinct within 10 years.

Countries voting in favor of the moratorium were: Australia, Argentina, Denmark, France, New Zealand, the Netherlands, Mexico, Oman, the Seychelles, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Opposed — in addition to Canada — were Chile, Iceland, Japan, South Korea, Peru, South Africa, Spain and the Soviet Union.

Abstaining were Brazil and Norway.

Woman PM for Dominica

ROSEAU, Dominica (Reuter) — The Caribbean got its first woman prime minister Monday following a landslide victory by the Democratic Freedom party of Mary Eugenia Charles in the island's first elections since independence in 1978.

Unofficially, Dominica Freedom got 17 seats to two for the incumbent Democratic Labor party.

Another plant drowns in Chrysler's red ink

Times News Services

DETROIT — Battered by the auto industry's worst recession since the 1930s, the struggling Chrysler Corp. has made another retreat.

As part of a new effort to trim losses expected to exceed $1 billion this year, the No. 3 automaker Monday ordered a seventh plant closed and scaled down operations at another.

When completed at the end of this year, the actions will add 1,800 workers to Chrysler's long list of indefinitely idled employees.

Chrysler said it will close its Huber Avenue Foundry in Detroit and will consolidate press room operations at its Mack Stamping Plant, also in Detroit, with other stamping operations in Michigan and Ohio.

The foundry currently employs 1,283 hourly and salaried workers, the company said, while 450 hourly and 75 salaried workers at the stamping plant will be idled.

Chrysler said laid-off stamping plant workers will be offered jobs at other facilities. Another 1,300 workers at the Mack plant will remain on the job in manufacturing operations unaffected by the move.

Thus begins a new round of cutbacks forced by an industry-wide car sales depression.

Separately, Ford Motor Co. said it is cutting heavy-duty truck production at a plant near Lousiville, Ky., July 28, laying off 1,660 hourly workers and 120 salaried employees.

Carter does rain dance on hustings

Times News Services

President Carter, promising to pray for rain and cooler weather in sun-scorched states, says he will hasten federal aid to Texas farmers and urge federal agencies to "do everything possible to alleviate the drought and intense heat wave."

Thunderstorms on Monday in parts of the southern and southwestern United Staates brought some relief from three weeks of near-40° temperatures, but also brought flooding that forced residents in at least one state to leave their homes.

More that 100 families in the Mississippi-delta town of Belzoni were forced by flooding to flee their homes.

Forecasters warn the deadly heat wave could continue indefinitely and there is more concern the nation's breadbasket might come up emptier at harvest time.

"Our dry-land corn has had it. It's just burned up," Nebraska extension agent Allen Boettcher said.

And the flow of commerce was threatened along the Mississippi River. Coast Guard officials said barges have begun scraping the river bottom because water levels have fallen so low.

Coast Guard spokesman James Redmond in St. Louis said barges may start running aground, choking off river traffic, if water levels drop any further.

The north and northeast, which had been spared the heat plaguing other parts of the U.S., on Monday endured a second day of temperatures near 40. Water emergencies were declared in New York and Philadelphia.

The heat has been blamed for at least 1,191 deaths in 21 states since June 22, an unoffical survey showed.

"We're trying to do everything we can," Carter said as he surveyed a parched field of grain sorghum in Justin, Tex.

"We'll be praying for rain and cooler weather," added the president, who is facing a stiff challenge from Republican challenger Ronald Reagan in the November elections.

Richard Alexander, an official of the U.S. agriculture department, said the farmland Carter inspected has yielded only 200 pounds of sorghum an acre, down from a projected 3,500 pounds an acre.

While Carter promised aid to Texas, Arkansas officials were still seeking help and Missouri was looking for more.

Senator David Pryor (Dem.—Ark.) said he was "appalled and frustrated" because the Farmers Home Administration has not declared the state a heat-wave disaster area. The Small Business Administration declared a disaster area in the state last Thursday.

Temperatures in both Arkansas and Missouri cooled somewhat on Monday, but hot weather and increased humidity were expected to return by the end of the week. High temperatures in the 30s were reported Monday in Arkansas, while in Missouri only Joplin reported a temperature of 40° or higher.

In Mississippi, 128 millimetres of rain Monday brought some relief from the heat, but forced more than 1,000 residents to leave their homes. The National Weather Service placed the entire Mississippi Delta under a flood watch Monday night.

Billions of dollars in crops, cattle and poultry have been wiped out by the blistering heat. Food industry officials said prices would rise substantially if conditions immediately returned to normal.

Joe socks Hong Kong as Kim heads for Guam

HONG KONG (UPI) — Typhoon Joe, packing winds of more than 160 kilometres an hour, bore down on southern China today but first took its toll on Hong Kong, bringing the crown colony to a virtual standstill.

Two people died in Hong Kong as the typhoon approached and 59 others were injured by broken glass and falling debris. The deaths occurred when scaffolding on a construction site collapsed hurling one workman to the ground and killing one passerby.

The typhoon roared through the northern Philippines Monday battering the rice and coconut producing areas on the main island of Luzon. Heavy rain caused flash floods in metropolitan Manila and triggered landslides in Baguio, 290 km north of Manila.

Another typoon, Kim, the ninth of the year, sprang up in waters north of Yap Island in the western Pacific today and was moving west-northwest at 57 km/h toward Guam and the Philippines.

Typhoon Joe's center winds never came closer than 190 miles south of Hong Kong and by the late afternoon the Royal Observatory said it was on a west to northwest path bearing down on Hainan Island and Leizhou Peninsula in southern China.
